Strawboard Installing Boiler, Stack Addition

C. C. OF A. PLANT TO CLOSE SHORT TIME FOR REPAIR

Big Pipe To Be 170 Feet In Air; Better Draft To Be Provided

FOUR UNITS REPLACED

Modern Equipment Being Put In Paper Mill; Much Progress Shown

Continuing an expansion and improvement program that is expected to make the Circleville plant of the Container Corporation of America one of the most modern in the organization, laborers are preparing to begin work Monday on an addition to the stack that will send the big pipe 170 feet above the ground. The stack is at present about 110 feet high.

Because of this improvement and a boiler project that is now under way, the plant will be closed for two weeks starting Monday.

Plant officials said Saturday that the top of the present stack is becoming old and that a better draft is needed, thus the addition.

The new boiler and stoker being constructed now will replace four small steam-producing units now in operation. The four small units will be retained however in case of emergency. It is planned to have the new equipment in operation about Nov. 1.

The most modern equipment possible is being installed. The boiler will be built for 600 pounds per square inch steam pressure and will be 1,000 horse power in size. Coal will be burned on a self feeding stoker which can burn Ohio and West Virginia coals efficiently. About 20 percent reduction in coal consumption is anticipated.

The new steam generator is the second major step in completing plans for an almost entirely new paper mill. A new rotary room where the straw is cooked was built in 1936-37.

Route 22 Project Work Moves Along

Practically all concrete work on one of the three bridges on the Route 22 improvement, west of Circleville, has been completed. This bridge is on the eastern end of the improvement. It contains six sections.

Three sections of the center bridge in the improvement, including nine sections, have been poured. Two more sections will be completed next week. Work will start early in August on the third bridge. Paving on the western end of the project will be started next week.

DITCH DIGGER RESCUED IN LANCASTER CAVE-IN

LANCASTER, July 22—Kenneth E. Motter, 26, narrowly escaped death, Friday afternoon, when trapped in a nine foot ditch by a cave-in.

Forest Noland, 28, working with Motter, dug the earth from Motter's head and summoned police. Motter was removed to Lancaster hospital for examination for possible internal injuries.

ANOTHER QUILTS LOUISIANA JOBS

Seymour Weiss, Confidant Of Huey Long, Gives Up After Indictment

NEW ORLEANS, July 22—Resignation of the indicted Seymour Weiss, politically powerful hotel man, from all public offices today added fuel to the flames crackling about Louisiana's political graft scandal.

Weiss quit as president of the board of commissioners of the port of New Orleans and as a member of the New Orleans police and fire boards.

Last Monday, Weiss, one of the triumvirate which took over Louisiana's political machine after the assassination of Huey Long, was indicted by a federal grand jury with four others on a charge of using the mails to defraud taxpayers, the state and its university.

Indicted with Weiss was Dr. James Monroe Smith, resigned president of Louisiana State university.

BURNING MOHAVE DESERT CLAIMS LIFE OF MINER

BARSTOW, Cal., July 22—The burning Mohave desert gathered in another life today—and played a grim jest on the man whose life it had taken.

Only a scant half mile from the life giving water of Saratoga Springs, William L. Hyatt, 62-year-old miner, died from thirst and desert heat, authorities reported.

He had walked 20 miles across the burning sands. He had crawled two miles more. And then, as he dug feebly into the sands in hope of finding moisture, he died.

Just over the hill that hid them from his sight were the springs. Hyatt, employed in a mine, had started for the mine when his car broke down. Two other miners, coming on the stalled car, followed the footprints leading away from it. Ten miles away they found an empty canteen. At the end of another ten miles they found where Hyatt had fallen; had struggled to his knees; had crawled on, clutching at greasewood. They found holes dug in the sand in a vain search for water. They found Hyatt, dead.

COLUMBUS, July 22—Duties as chief of the federal security administration will prevent Paul V. McNutt from accepting an invitation to speak at the rally of the United Ohio Democratic league in Columbus on July 29, the league learned today.

UNIFORMED White Russian soldiers aid Japanese officials in their campaign against Great Britain in North China by carrying anti-English banners through Tientsin. The campaign started with Japan's blockade of the British concession in Tientsin.

Attempt to Beach Sub With 99 Aboard Fails

LIVERPOOL, July 22—An attempt to beach the sunken British submarine Thetis with its cargo of 99 dead failed today when thick hawsers attached to the craft parted and the "iron coffin" plumped back onto the muddy sea bed.

The plan to lift the submersible which went down June 1 during a practice dive in Liverpool Bay with 103 men and officers, was said to be one of the most ingenious ever devised in submarine salvage.

(Background Note: The Thetis sank a few days after the sinking of the American submarine Squalus, May 23, off Portsmouth, N. H., with a loss of 26 lives. The first attempt to raise the Squalus met with similar disheartening failure, the submersible plunging back to the ocean bottom when the pontoon chains snapped.)

Eight stout rope cables were made fast to the Thetis from the rescue ship Zelo. Winches pulled the hawsers taut at low tide.

At high tide, the sea lifted the Zelo and with it the Thetis slung below.

The plan was to tow the Thetis under water slowly toward shore, 14 miles. The Zelo was to halt whenever the Thetis struck bottom, await low tide, and then draw the hawsers taut once more.

At full tide, the Zelo was to proceed again toward shore, repeating the process until shallow water was reached when winches from shore were to draw the Thetis onto the beach.

The Zelo was about to steam toward shore when the cables broke this morning and the sea reclaimed its dead. Six weeks of preparations were lost, but rescue crews immediately set to work using additional cables, to re-fasten the Thetis.

Only four escaped from the sunken submarine, with special escape "lungs," in the worst sub disaster in history.

MARKET CLIMBS TO NEW PEAKS IN EARLY TRADE

NEW YORK, July 22—The stock market climbed to new peaks on the advance at the start today, with gains running to more than a point on a broad front.

Trading was at an active pace for a Saturday, as blocks of 1,000 to 2,500 shares changed hands. Loft extended its spectacular rise to another new high, starting up % on 2,500 shares at 20, then jumping to 21%.

American Telephone, on a delayed opening, spurted two points with a sale of 1,000 shares at 167%.

Chrysler, Bethlehem, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse Electric, and Allied Chemical were among the leaders to rise a point or more.

ARMENIAN BOY, LOST 14 DAYS, KIDNAP VICTIM?

NEW YORK, July 22—Fear that some imprudent remark might dash whatever ebullient hope remains for the safe return of their missing 16-year-old son today sealed the lips of the Dadourian family in Yonkers.

The boy, Hovannes Dadourian, member of a well-to-do Armenian household, has been missing for the last 14 days and was believed by police to have been kidnapped and possibly murdered.

Dickran Dadourian, the father, denied to newspaperman the youth's disappearance was in any way connected with the assassination on Christmas Eve of 1933 of Archbishop Leon Tourian of the Armenian church.

TOLES' ACCOUNT OF KNIFE DEATH BEING CHECKED

City and county authorities Saturday were continuing to investigate the story of Lonnie Toles, 37-year-old Negro, that another Negro stabbed Noble Crawford, May 14, in the Scioto river bottom district.

Toles was taken at noon to the city jail where he was placed in a cell with the man named by him as the killer. Although rumor insisted that the cell was wired, Police Chief William McCrady, who is conducting the investigation with Deputy Sheriff Earl Weaver, termed the report false.

The officers are seeking to learn whether Toles is telling the truth or whether he committed the stabbing murder alone. He has been sentenced to a one-to-20-year term in the Ohio penitentiary on a manslaughter charge.

DEM CHIEF "DISPLEASED"

Jim Quoted As Opposed To Roosevelt Campaigning In 1940

NEW YORK, July 22—The New York Journal and American today said that Postmaster General James A. Farley arrived in New York today preparatory to a "showdown" with President Roosevelt at Hyde Park tomorrow on the third-term issue.

The Journal-American story added:

"Widely-spread reports credit the national and state Democratic chairman with private statements that he is against a third term for the President, will tell him so, and intends to risk a split in the party to fight the President if he runs.

"There is no doubt, of course, that there is a serious break in the political relationship between the President and the man who successfully steered his 1932 and 1936 campaign.

"But many of Farley's friends view the reports as trial balloons he is sending up in an effort to clarify a situation that already has shaken the Democratic party to its roots.

"When Roosevelt and Farley sit down to have a heart-to-heart talk tomorrow at Hyde Park, therefore, it is anticipated they will have it out.

MOSCOW SPEEDS ALL YEAR WORK ON GREAT FLEET

MOSCOW, July 22—As tension between Japan and Russia over the Sakhalin island oilfields increased today, Shipbuilding Commissar Ivan T. Tevosyan announced a large scale naval building program which is designed to give Russia a fleet second to none.

Tevosyan hinted Russia has now the largest submarine fleet in the world, but didn't specify any figures. He declared that battle-ships and cruisers which will be added to the Russian navy within a few years will be the strongest in the world from the standpoint of speed, invulnerability and armaments.

By 1942-43, he asserted, Russia will occupy top rank in construction of both fighting and merchant vessels. Russian ship-builders have learned how to launch ships in Winter as well as Summer, he said, and building will be pushed hard all the year round.

"INJURED MAN" PROVES TO BE INTOXICATED 'KNIGHT'

An intoxicated hobo from Knoxville, Tenn., was lodged in the basement of the city building, Friday night, after being picked up along Route 22, east of Circleville.

The sheriff's department received a call that a man was lying along the road, probably injured. When officers found he was only intoxicated he was lodged in the "hobo camp" for the night and ordered out of town Saturday morning.

Two other hobos were lodged in jail, Friday night, to sober up and ordered out of town Saturday.

RETAILERS ASK TON OF PENNIES TO AID DRIVE FOR $10,000

A ton of pennies! It's not a newsboy's nightmare but the goal of a drive to be opened soon for Circleville's playground by the Retail Merchants association.

Arrangements for the penny-campaign were made Friday at a meeting of the organization in the New American hotel coffee shop. Placards boosting the playground program, equipped with glass tubes for penny contributions will be placed in 50 downtown business places.

Pennies will be collected at regular intervals and heaped in a downtown store window where residents may keep in touch with the success of the drive.

Merchants explained the penny campaign would give all persons an opportunity to contribute to the playground program in a manner that would not pinch their pocketbooks.

If the organization is successful in its drive, the park fund will be boosted to the extent of about $3,000. A local banker explained that $100 worth of pennies weighs 65 pounds.

Reports To Be Asked

Frank Lynch, chairman of the drive for the playground, said a meeting would be called early next week to receive reports from district workers conducting a financial campaign for the park.

The city has been divided into six districts for the financial campaign.

Goal of the playground drive is $10,000. This would provide $3,000 for the purchase of land in the Northend and for the city's share of a W.P.A. project for improvement of the playground.

CHARLES NILES, NATIVE OF CITY, IS DEAD AT 83

Charles Henry Niles, 83, a lifelong resident of Circleville, died Saturday at 7:40 a. m. at his home, 324 S. Washington street. Mr. Niles had suffered from a heart ailment for the last 18 months.

The funeral will be Monday at 3 p. m. at the home, the Rev. Robert T. Kelsey of the Presbyterian church officiating. Burial will be in Forest cemetery by the Albaugh Co., pallbearers will include Frank Rader, Guy Rader, Bruce Stevenson, David Courtwright, George F. Grand-Girard, A. J. Hegele and Charles Wilson.

Mr. Niles was born May 17, 1856, a son of Orasmus E. and Elizabeth Rudy Niles, and married Emilie Hegele, who survives, on Dec. 1, 1896. His father, a native of Vermont, came to Circleville in 1846 by canal packet. The elder Mr. Niles was a printer and shortly after establishing his residence here became owner of the Watchman, a weekly publication. He died at an advanced age.

Mr. Niles was a retired farmer. He was active in his earlier years in politics, serving at one time as safety director under George M. Fitzpatrick. After his retirement Mr. Niles did extensive traveling through the United States.

In addition to his widow, Mr. Niles is survived by a niece and three nephews.

FORMER CHIEF OF POLICE IN CITY WINS COURT SUIT

A Common Pleas court jury at Portsmouth returned a verdict Friday in favor of Harry S. Sheets, Portsmouth chief of police and former Circleville resident, and the Aetna Casualty Co., who bonded Sheets, in an $8,000 damaged action filed by Mrs. Jane See, Sciotoville florist.

Mrs. See charged the official with false imprisonment. She contended she was arrested without a warrant on July 28, 1936 and held in the city jail for 12 hours. She said the imprisonment impaired her health.

The police chief denied he used harsh language, as charged by the plaintiff, and used force to make the arrest. He also denied a charge that he threatened the plaintiff with a two-by-four plank. The jury deliberated 15 minutes.

40 ROSS COUNTY FARMERS ATTEND DEMONSTRATION

Forty Ross county men attended a demonstration of the possibilities of soil conservation work held Friday on the farm of Mrs. Cora Rader Hood, Pickaway township. Fred Keeler, Ross county agricultural agent, was in charge of the program.

This demonstration, Mr. Keeler explained, is one of the steps in the development of a unified land use program in Ross county. Mr. Keeler is one of the outstanding men in the state in the development of a land use program.

The farm of Mrs. Hood was selected so that the Ross county people would have no knowledge of the background of the farm. In the demonstration, H. E. Hecker, soil conservationist of Camp Ross of the Soil Conservation Service, divided the group into four sections. Each group then toured the farm studying the erosion, loss of top soil, silting and topography of the land.

At the conclusion of the tour, Mr. Hecker presented a brief plan by which this farm could be adapted to a program for improving fertility and stopping of soil loss. The very hilly areas, according to Mr. Hecker, should be retired to forests. Diversion ditches and sod waterways may be used to control water movements and permanent pasture was aid also in the control program.

WASHINGTON, July 22—The Hatch bill—a stern measure designed to take politics out of relief and sharply limit federal employees political activity—went to the White House today with presidential approval conjectural.

Approved by the senate after the house had "put the teeth back" in the bill as previously passed by the upper branch, even the measure's sponsor — Senator Hatch (D) New Mexico—expressed doubt that Mr. Roosevelt would sign it into law.

In its final form, the bill contains the following provisions:

1. Prohibits intimidation or coercion of anyone—including relief workers—for the purpose of influencing votes.
2. Prohibits solicitation of campaign funds from persons on relief or persons administering relief funds.
3. Prohibits promising "any employment or benefit" by virtue of funds appropriated by congress.
4. Prohibits action to "deprive or threaten to deprive" any person from employment where the employment is made possible by funds appropriated by congress.
5. Includes United States district attorneys, collectors of customs, collectors of internal revenue, and thousands of others.

40 ROSS COUNTY FARMERS ATTEND DEMONSTRATION

Forty Ross county men attended a demonstration of the possibilities of soil conservation work held Friday on the farm of Mrs. Cora Rader Hood, Pickaway township. Fred Keeler, Ross county agricultural agent, was in charge of the program.

This demonstration, Mr. Keeler explained, is one of the steps in the development of a unified land use program in Ross county. Mr. Keeler is one of the outstanding men in the state in the development of a land use program.

The farm of Mrs. Hood was selected so that the Ross county people would have no knowledge of the background of the farm. In the demonstration, H. E. Hecker, soil conservationist of Camp Ross of the Soil Conservation Service, divided the group into four sections. Each group then toured the farm studying the erosion, loss of top soil, silting and topography of the land.

At the conclusion of the tour, Mr. Hecker presented a brief plan by which this farm could be adapted to a program for improving fertility and stopping of soil loss. The very hilly area, according to Mr. Hecker, should be retired to forests. Diversion ditches and sod waterways may be used to control water movements and permanent pasture was said also in the control program.

The demonstration was planned so that Ross county folk may be (Continued on Page Eight)

JUDGE BLOSSER SILENT; OTHERS RUN FOR OFFICE

Judge Peter J. Blosser, of Chillicothe, whose term as a judge of the Fourth District Court of Appeals expires Feb. 8, 1941, has no announcement to make at present concerning the 1940 election.

Attorney Verner E. Metcalf, of Marietta, a member of the State Unemployment Compensation board of review, will be a candidate for judge of the Court of Appeals in the 1940 election.

It was reported probable that Judge Roscoe W. White, of Gallipolis, would also be a candidate.

Castoff Drives Giants Into Seventh Consecutive Loss In National

By Pat Robinson NEW YORK, July 22—There has been a strong revival lately of talk of shifting the Browns and Phillies to other towns operating minor league clubs on the grounds that neither St. Louis nor Philadelphia is capable of supporting two major league clubs.

This, of course, is much easier said than done for many reasons. It would be much easier for the American league to buy out the Browns and the National to purchase the Phils and then simply scrap both clubs and let each league operate on a seven-club basis. After all, there is no law compelling each league to have eight teams.

Among baseball people there is always strong sympathy for the owners of the Browns who seem to be trying hard to build up a winner despite heavy obstacles. No such sympathy exists for the Phils, however, because whenever they do develop a good ball player they immediately sell him. There are enough ex-Phillies with other National league clubs today to put the Phils in the thick of the pennant scramble if they had all been retained.

Many Stars Sold

Bartell of the Cubs and Camilli of the Dodgers certainly would be a big help to that Philly infield and Paeasau of the Cubs and Walters of the Reds surely wouldn't hurt the Philly pitching staff. All are ex-Phillies.

Walters was sold for $45,000 and some baseball window dressing last year and yesterday he turned in his 16th victory as the Reds took the first game of a double-header from the Dodgers 4-1. Hugh Casey pitched the Dodgers to an even break, 4-3, on Todd's homer and a two-run wild throw by Johnny Vander Meer.

The Ladies Day attendance was 34,513 of whom 13,005 were members of the shriller sex. The club owners thought it was a bright idea when they inaugurated these ladies day affairs. Now they are wondering if they haven't built their own Frankenstein. Several thousand men with a buck-ten in hand were turned away in Brooklyn yesterday because the gals had the foresight to get there early and fill the park.

The Giants also had about 10,000 femmes on hand as they dropped their seventh straight, the Pirates taking them 4-3 on Chuck Klein's ninth inning homer with two out and two aboard.

And, Klein, by the way, is another ex-Phillie. He has now hit safely in 20 consecutive games and is the main reason why the Pirates have climbed into the first division.

Patty in Hospital

BECAUSE of an operation, Patty Berg probably won't be able to defend her national women's golf title next month. After the 21-year-old star underwent an appendectomy in Minneapolis, her father, H. L. Berg, declared she probably wouldn't be permitted to swing a club until September.

KASEYS DROPPED AGAIN IN GAME WITH COLONELS

ST. PAUL, July 22—It was the opinion today that Kansas City's loss in the annual American Association All-Star game must have done something to the Blues.

Their lead over Minneapolis stood at only two games today, as another defeat at the hands of the Louisville Colonels was recorded. The Millers, meanwhile, slugged out a 10 to 2 victory over Toledo.

Charley Wagner pitched the Colonels win scattering 10 hits while his teammates were making the most of nine safeties. Grace and Storti hit homers at Minneapolis as Harry Smyth kept 10 Mud Hen hits scattered.

At Milwaukee, the Indianapolis Indians scored their fifth straight win. The Indians scored in the first two innings and in the last two to pile up six runs to the Brewers' three.

At St. Paul, the seventh-place Columbus Red Birds recorded a 8 to 5 win over the Saints as the Birds made 16 hits to St. Paul's 5.

and the Cubs a 3-1 decision over the Bees and St. Louis and Philadelphia split a pair, the Phils taking the first, 16-2, but bowing before Cooper in the nightcap, 7-0.

Yank Streak Ends

The Yanks' victory streak was snapped at eight straight when Ed Smith left-handed them into five-hit submission, the White Sox winning 4-1. The Athletics, with Hank Phippen pitching well enough to justify his name, turned back the Tigers, 6-2, and the Senators fell before Al Milnar and the Indians, 5-2.

The Red Sox had to travel 11 heats to get a 6-3 decision over the St. Louis Browns and thus cut the Yankee lead to a mere nine games.

Bird Dog Club To Join Jackson In Field Trial

The Pickaway County Bird Dog club and the Southern Ohio Bird Dog association, of Portsmouth, will sponsor a joint bird dog field trial Oct. 27, 28 and 29 at Jackson.

This announcement was made Saturday by Ralph M. Leach, president of the Pickaway County Bird Dog club.

The trial will be run in four classes, with the feature to be an open all age event with a purse of $500. Other classes will be the open derby, members all age stake and members derby.

FORBES DIRECT WINS TOP RACE AT OLD ORCHARD

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., July 22—Forbes Direct, son of Napoleon Direct, had bettered his own previous record today in winning the 2:03 pace of yesterday's 10-race Grand Circuit program in two straight heats.

Forbes Direct, a brother of Billy Direct, won the first heat in 2:02 1/4, and the second in 2:01 1/4 under the reins of Billy Hall. Robert Hanover was second in both heats.

Raymond J. won the classified page in straight heats in 2:09 1/2 and 2:10. Sunny Meade won the 2:10 trot.

The 2:06 pace went to Lee Overton and the 2:20 pace to Brady Hanover in straight heats.

TALES IN TIDBITS

BY WILLIAM RITT

Those two minor league "hopes" of the Cleveland Indians, Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack, both with Buffalo, are burning up the International loop with their big bats. . . . At last squint the two had slammed out 22 home runs between them in 77 games. . . . Joe Brown, sans the "E" middle initial, is defending champion in the Iowa state open golf tourney beginning Aug. 22. . . . Hank Boroway, the Fordham flash now with Newark, has won three and lost two games for the Bears thus far. . . . He has averaged nearly five strikeouts a game. . . . That popular winner of the national open golf tourney, Byron Nelson, is an avid baseball fan. . . . Frank Crosetti, Yankee infielder, struck out 105 times last year. . . . Bucky still hits 'em hard.

Philadelphia Eagles, pro grid club, should be the big magnet in the East this year. . . . Why? Ever heard of Davey (Slingshot) O'Brien? He's with 'em. . . . Frank McCormick, Reds' first sacker, hasn't missed an inning of play since he grabbed off that job in the opener in 1938.

With the season still months away, football ideas are flooding the syndicates. . . . 'Tis said Mickey Cochrane is making twice as much money this year away from baseball. . . . And Mickey was one of the highest paid baseball stars. . . . Watch for Johnny Paycheck, Midwest heavy, wow 'em in the East when and if he appears there.

PAR IN DANGER AS GOLF STARS VIE AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, July 22—Par seemed due for another shellacking today as the nation's leading golfers teed off in the second 18-hole round of the Western Open golf championship over the No. 1 and No. 3 courses of the Medinah Country Club.

Chicago's own Dick Metz set the pace in the first day's firing, coming home over No. 3 course with a four-under-par 67, but Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles and Jimmy Hines of Lakeville, N. Y., also ousted par on the same course, Mangrum netting 68 and Hines totaling 69. An amateur, Milton Beal of Davenport, Ia., scored an even-par 71 over the course.

On the No. 1 links, National Open Champion Byron Nelson of Reading, Pa., led the way, finishing with a two-under-par 68. He was chased by Harry Adams, a home pro, who took 69, and Don Armstrong, Aurora, Ill., amateur, who had a 71. Vic Ghezzi of Philadelphia also took 71.

The par-busting leaders did not spread-eagle the field, however, with many top-notchers among both the pros and simon-pures remaining not far off the pace.

Ralph Guldahl, who seeks his fourth straight victory in the tourney, was seven strokes behind Metz over No. 3 with a 74, but the big Texan always is a threat, known for his strong finishes. He was considered still very much in the running as after today's 18 holes the title was to be decided with a 36-hole test tomorrow over No. 3 course, with the low 50 pros and low 22 amateurs, plus all ties, battling it out.

REDS WIN ONE FOR BUCK, BUT FAIL IN SECOND

Walters Takes Sixteenth; Vander Meer Throws Bunt Into Field

PHILADELPHIA, July 22—The first place Cincinnati Reds today invaded the lair of the last place Philadelphia Phillies after splitting a double-header at Brooklyn.

Bucky Walters, converted infielder, won his sixteenth National League game of the season as the Reds took a 4 to 1 decision in the first game. The Dodgers nosed out the Reds in the nightcap, 4 to 3.

Leo Durocher's team resorted to bunting to take the second contest. Behind 3 to 1, the first man up in Brooklyn's half of the seventh, singled, and the next two bunted successfully. Another bunt followed and Johnny Vander Meer, on the mound for the Reds, promptly threw the ball into left field, the tying and winning runs scoring.

KAYAK II FAVORITE TO COP THE $50,000 ADDED HOLLYWOOD GOLD CUP RACE

ARLINGTON PARK, Ill., July 22 — It was Johnstown against the field today in the $50,000 mile-and-a-quarter Classic Stakes at Arlington Park race track. Post time was 4:45 p. m.

William Woodward's big three-year-old champion was an odds-on overnight favorite at 2 to 5 to win the gruelling 11-year-old turf event against such outstanding competition as Challedon, winner over Viscounty.

Challedon, owned by W. L. Brann, was the next heaviest backed entry, being held at 3 to 1, while Heather Broom stood at 5 to 1 and the Woolford Farm's entry of Technician and Unerring was rated at 8 to 1.

Predictions of a lightning-fast track were considered all in favor of Johnstown the colt has proved himself practically unbeatable in favorable going, but a poor runner in a heavy track.

Some 50,000 race lovers were expected to be on hand for the big race, and from a poll of those already on hand—interested and disinterested parties alike—it appeared the almost unanimous impression was Johnstown would make the classic a one-horse race.

Earle Sande, trainer of the well-liked Heather Broom, didn't think his horse had much chance. He said:

"You can't beat Johnstown on a fast track. He's one of the greatest."

Much the same opinion was expressed by other trainers and owners. Said Herbert Woolf, owner of Technician and Unerring:

"Johnstown is much the best. Technician might come up second."

HOLLYWOOD PARK, July 22—East mot West in a turf "Titanic" today when Kayak II and Cravat hooked up in mile and a quarter race, the $50,000 added Hollywood Gold cup.

Seven were to go but Cravat, top handicap division ace of the East, and Kayak, Charles Howard's transplanted California horse

SCHOOL OF FOREIGN MISSIONS FEATURES NEXT WEEK AT CAMPGROUND

Many Noted Persons On Big Program

King Avenue Pastor To Be In Pulpit For Sunday Morning Services

The morning sermon at Lancaster campgrounds Sunday will be given by Dr. W. M. Briggs, pastor of King Avenue M. E. church, Columbus. Dr. Briggs came to the Ohio conference last Fall from Illinois.

Afternoon services will be under the direction of the Rev. E. S. Matheny, of Columbus, chaplain of the Ohio senate. The afternoon program will include a short concert by Madame Blanche Mathena, of Columbus, and several outstanding musicians. The evening entertainment will be a concert by Madame Mathena and her chorus consisting of several Columbus, Newark and Zanesville singers.

Sunday school classes will be taught by Bland L. Stradley, dean of the college of arts and sciences, Ohio State university, as the adult Bible class teacher, and Prof. H. F. Moniger, former principal of Newark high school, for the young people's class.

Next week's program at the camp is the School of Foreign Missions. Special features are scheduled daily. On Monday the Vern Pearl Kemp ensemble, consisting of five persons, will give two diversified programs of instrumental and vocal music, readings and impersonations. Dr. W. Stuart Carnes will present two lectures Tuesday, "The Lost Cities of the Mayas," and "The Land of Mystery." His programs will include moving pictures, display of native costumes and animal skins. The Ritz Trumpeters, a musical organization, will present programs on Wednesday. Two comedies will be presented Thursday by the Hanscom players. Women's Foreign Missionary Day will be observed Friday. Two addresses will be given by Dr. Emory Ross, secretary of the American Mission to Lepers. The Saturday program will feature the Sterling Varieties.

REV. V. E. MCCOY SPEAKS LAST TIME HERE SUNDAY

The Rev. V. E. McCoy, 1226 S. Pickaway street, will deliver his last sermon Sunday as pastor of the Circleville Church of the Nazarene. He recently accepted a call to the pastorate of the church at Payne, O., Paulding county. The Rev. Mr. McCoy has served the Circleville church for the last three years.

He will be succeeded by the Rev. Mrs. A. M. Morehead, of Celina. Mrs. Morehead has been a pastor for 20 years. Mr. Morehead is a minister also.

The Rev. Mrs. Morehead will preach her first sermon in the Circleville church on Sunday, Aug. 6. The pastors will attend camp-meeting in Columbus the last Sunday in July.

Many Noted Persons On Big Program

King Avenue Pastor To Be In Pulpit For Sunday Morning Services

The morning sermon at Lancaster campgrounds Sunday will be given by Dr. W. M. Briggs, pastor of King Avenue M. E. church, Columbus. Dr. Briggs came to the Ohio conference last fall from Illinois.

Afternoon services will be under the direction of the Rev. E. S. Matheny, of Columbus, chaplain of the Ohio senate. The afternoon program will include a short concert by Madame Blanche Mathena, of Columbus, and several outstanding musicians. The evening entertainment will be a concert by Madame Mathena and her chorus consisting of several Columbus, Newark and Zanesville singers.

Sunday school classes will be taught by Bland L. Stradley, dean of the college of arts and sciences, Ohio State university, as the adult Bible class teacher, and Prof. H. F. Moniger, former principal of Newark high school, for the young people's class.

Next week's program at the camp is the School of Foreign Missions. Special features are scheduled daily. On Monday the Vern Pearl Kemp ensemble, consisting of five persons, will give two diversified programs of instrumental and vocal music, readings and impersonations. Dr. W. Stuart Carnes will present two lectures Tuesday, "The Lost Cities of the Mayas," and "The Land of Mystery." His programs will include moving pictures, display of native costumes and animal skins. The Ritz Trumpeters, a musical organization, will present programs on Wednesday. Two comedies will be presented Thursday by the Hanscom players. Women's Foreign Missionary Day will be observed Friday. Two addresses will be given by Dr. Emory Ross, secretary of the American Mission to Lepers. The Saturday program will feature the Sterling Varieties.

THE PROPOSED BOYCOTT

THERE is serious talk of "cracking down" on Japan with an official boycott. American citizens are exasperated with Japan's actions, both in the war against China and the movement to push Occidentals out of Asia. More and more people are coming to feel that something drastic needs to be done to stop Japanese aggression and arrogance.

Enthusiasm for a boycott should not be allowed to obliterate from our minds the complete significance and seriousness of such a move, or its possible consequences. The Japanese would be greatly offended by it. They would consider it a definitely unfriendly act. It would constitute a form of war. It would cost us at once our $150,000,000 business with Japan. It might lead soon to sharper disputes between the two governments, and eventually to actual war. It would be abandonment of the neutrality we now profess.

These are merely points to be considered. They are not listed as arguments against the proposed boycott but as aids to foreseeing and preparing for the situation which would be created by it. Look before you leap is sound advice to legislators and nations as well as to individuals.

A TENOR AND AN ANTHEM

IT has long been known that The Star-Spangled Banner is a difficult song for the average citizen to sing, although large groups make a stirring thing of it with the aid of a good leader and a lively band. Still, no one has considered the national anthem beyond the skill of a professional singer.

It comes, therefore, as a shock to read that a famous American-born tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company is about to file suit in a Federal District Court attacking the legality of a resolution of Congress in 1931 making The Star-Spangled Banner the national anthem.

The song, he maintains, is a painful tonsil-twister. The singer dislikes not only its difficult range but also its "vindicative, unpoetic words" and its "Anacreontic origin." The singer even goes so far as to challenge to a fight or a debate a certain band leader who had prepared a simpler version of the music.

All this is nearly as exciting as the reports—due any day—of sea monsters and other hot-weather phenomena. One suspects a close similarity between the tenor-and-anthem story and other silly-season tales. Of course one would never suspect tenor, band leader, or their agents of cooking up a merry little publicity stunt.

It's about time for a song with the refrain, "They gotta quit kickin' John Bull around."

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to another morning that carried the feel of Autumn. Wonder whether we will have an early one? Scanned the morning prints over a cup of coffee and then by wagon headed for the post, there to meet T. P. Brown, the insurance man, who will be eighty in a few days. At the plant found everything moving smoothly, so did head out over the paves by foot.

There goes Gardener Harold Grant. It was early last Spring when Harold decided he should have a flower garden. He bought seeds of many varieties, collected others from friends, prepared the ground and one day placed the seeds in carefully prepared trenches. Then, up came a great wind. Harold says that today when he sees a flower anywhere in the ville, regardless of how far it is from his home, he is inclined to claim it. A half dozen plants grew and he transplanted them, spaded the ground once more, consulted Howard Orr, the canner, and then planted lima beans. "Everyone laughed when I went out there with the seed," Harold says, "but they all come to me now for beans." All except me. I'd rather keep on laughing.

Bugs McCrady once was with a circus and has many tales of interest when he can be started on the subject. Once the circus men engaged in battle in a restaurant following an afternoon show and several of the townies were rather roughly treated. That night following the performance Bugs was hungry and decided to get something to eat. He was in the restaurant of trouble before he realized where he was. The restaurant was practically out of food, but Bugs finally got four bananas and walked out with two in each hand. As he left a big man approached him and said: "So, you are one of those wise guys with that circus, eh?" Bugs denied the alleged fact and finally convinced the belligerent citizen. As the man walked away Bugs thought of his food, looked down and saw that he had nothing left but skins in his hand. Well, he had lost his appetite anyway, so that wasn't so important.

Attended the Retail Merchants Association meeting at noon in the hotel and was agreeably surprised by the large attendance. Usually those sessions attract only four or five. That organization if given cooperation of the majority of local merchants can do much toward improving local business conditions.

Met Frank Lynch, prime mover of the playground movement, and learned that the money is not coming in as rapidly as he would like. Everyone should contribute to that cause. And to prove it Frank and the scrivener will go out in a day or two and take pictures of youngsters in spots where they now play.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN.

ADMINISTRATION SEEKS PURGE

WASHINGTON—Here are two scenes highly important to the national well-being which indicate the grim-visaged, clean-up policy being followed by the Roosevelt Administration today—a big change from three scant years ago.

SCENE 1 took place in the Mayflower Hotel in Washington in the Spring of 1936. The scene opens in the room of Seymour Weiss, recently indicted by a federal grand jury for selling hotel furnishings twice to the Louisiana State University. Weiss was Huey Long's supporter, financial backer, and mentor. Like Huey he had been bitterly opposed to Roosevelt, but now Huey was dead and Weiss, together with other Long supporters, was charged by the Government with income tax evasion.

Weiss paid only $1,239.43 taxes from 1929 to 1933, (a pitifully small sum considering that he was a big shot in Louisiana) and the Government claimed taxes of $27,070.16.

On this particular day Seymour Weiss was pacing the floor and rubbing his hands through his sparse hair.

"That dirty dog of a Jew," burred Weiss, who is Jewish himself, "he wants to crucify me. He won't listen to reason. He'll convict his own mother if he thought she was wrong."

"You're not referring by any chance to the Secretary of the Treasury, are you?" asked Harry Costello, a newspaperman who had been a close friend of Huey Long's.

"He's the only man spoiling my deal," moaned Weiss. "He wants to crucify me."

"Have you talked to Farley?" asked Costello. "Maybe he could do something for you."

"Yes, I talked to him, and he was non-committal."

The scene now shifts, later in the same day, to the White House where Harry Costello called upon Marvin MacIntyre, his former city editor on the Washington Times.

"Mac," said Costello, "did it ever occur to you that the Administration might arrange a rapprochement with the gang down in Louisiana. If so, I think I could be of some service to you."

"I think that's already being taken care of, Harry."

"Then no one has to worry?" asked Costello.

"No one," replied the President's secretary.

A few days later the Justice Department wired the district attorney in New Orleans to drop criminal action against Seymour Weiss and others. Instead he paid a penalty tax of $12,915.37. A few weeks later, Seymour Weiss and other politicians voted Louisiana's twenty delegates emphatically for Roosevelt at the 1936 Democratic National Convention. "Roosevelt's good enough for me," announced Seymour to newspaper reporters.

NOTE—Henry Morgenthau is reported to have threatened to resign as Secretary of the Treasury over the incident but was pacified by Roosevelt.

DIET AND HEALTH

Sun Is an Aid; Not a Cure-All

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

I CAME across a curious piece of lore the other day in the form of a quotation from Herodotus. He had visited a famous battlefield where the Persians had fought with the Egyptians. Among the skulls scattered around he noticed that the skull bones of the Persians were very thin. You could throw stones through them. But the Egyptian skulls were thick and hard. He ascribed this difference to the fact that the Egyptians exposed their bare heads to the sun. They not only had no headgear, but even shaved the head. The result was a thicker and tougher cranium.

I cannot agree with Herodotus, even assuming that he had his facts right. There is no reason to suppose that sunlight has any effect on the skull bones directly. It would be much easier to explain the circumstances by heredity. If it were true that there was a difference in the thickness of the Persian and Egyptian crania, it could have been produced by breeding.

No Effect on Hair
Many of us ascribe powers to the sun which it does not possess. The effect of sunlight on hair growth is practically nothing one way or another. There is a large school of thought that holds to the doctrine that baldness is due to wearing hats and keeping the scalp from being exposed to the sun and air. But an equally vigorous school maintains that sunlight is bad for the hair. Actual experiments, however, have been made which prove that it has no effect on the hair one way or the other.

Sunlight is real medicine though for certain diseases. It is a necessary factor in life. The most marvelous effects were obtained by Rollier, the Swiss physician, in treating tuberculosis of the bones and joints. Practically no other treatment was used and most of his patients he dispensed with casts or other forms of support of every kind. Fistulas and discharging sinuses healed up and stopped running, the bones healed and the general health was vastly improved.

It is notable, however, that another form of tuberculosis, of the lungs, is not improved; in fact, usually is made worse by too much exposure to sunlight.

Rickets Related
The disease which is particularly related to sunlight, however, is rickets. This disease of children only is caused by the inability of the body to utilize the calcium and phosphorus salts in building bones. Even when there is plenty of calcium and phosphorus in the food, it cannot be utilized unless there is also the vitamin called vitamin D. Vitamin D is made in animal bodies by the effect of sunshine on the skin. Vitamin D is formed in the skin as a result of exposure to sunlight, is carried to the liver and stored there until it is needed. Rickets is, therefore, a disease of darkness and dark seasons. Take advantage of your summer sun and store up plenty of it against the dark days of next winter.

Children who get plenty of sunshine while their permanent teeth are coming in are less apt to have molar teeth decay in after years, according to British researchers.

Sun bathing and air bathing together make for vigorous health. But sun bathing can be overdone, especially by the vacationer who thinks he has to get a whole season's tan in the first few days of his vacation. Not only may a bad skin burn result; headache and insomnia may follow.

All people have regarded the sun with veneration; for the ancient Egyptians it was one of their principal gods. The Greeks and Romans had special temples of the sun. It is a good sign of our own times that an interest in outdoor life is returning, and all classes are responding to it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Mrs. J. H. M.: "I would like to know if parsley-garlic is a good treatment for high blood pressure. I have tried drugs to no effect."
Answer: Neither parsley nor garlic, nor a combination, has any effect on high blood pressure. Neither have drugs. High blood pressure is an adjustment of the body to new conditions caused by a decrease in the elasticity and adaptability of the arteries. The only effective treatment is to reduce activity, worry and overeating.

M. B.: "What is palpitation of the heart? What causes it? Is it dangerous? Is there a cure for it?"
Answer: Palpitation of the heart is consciousness of the heart's action. In people over 40 it is common to have the heart miss a beat every now and then. This is usually noticeable, and constitutes palpitation. It is not dangerous. Treatment should be mostly psychological, consisting in an assurance that there is no danger.

J. S.: "Is there any remedy for weak ankles? I am 15 years old and do a bit of hiking and I have no bother with my ankles then, but in the winter when I attempt to skate they become tired and swell."

Answer: Skating puts a very severe strain on the ankles and calves, evidently more than you can stand just now. Exercises to strengthen the ankles muscles should be used first. Remember the muscles that stiffen the ankles are in the calves. Rising on the toes 50 to 100 times and then on the heels, morning and evening, should help.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Wings of Youth

By HELEN WELSHIMER

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

THE AUTOMATIC parachute, which Robert Kennedy had ordered for Sarah Anne, reached her a few days before she and Judith kept their last engagement. She tested it in the morning and admitted truthfully that it was safer. Her hand had not failed her since the day when Jack and Robert had been unexpected visitors, but the fear of such a repetition was gone now.

That same day brought a check from Miss Sarah and Miss Anne. The two old ladies had tried to make her accept it the day she was at home, but she had refused, because they had been so generous to her family. The accompanying note said:

"Sarah Anne, it's not much, but take it and buy yourself some clothes. Nothing gives a woman the lift that a new hat does. Once I had a beau who turned me down because I dressed to plain and lands sakes, I bought a new dress and hat, the fanciest things on the market, and in one week I had him and three others sitting on the front porch. Your clothes are nice, but it's about time you didn't have to hunt in bargain basements. This is all to be used for clothes, mind you. We'll expect to see them."

"Love to our namesake,"

"SARAH MOFFET."
Judith was happy and excited. Her father had sent her the deed to a hill, sprawling house half way up a hill near the airport. It had a terrace that looked down on a small lake, and the hillside was a flower garden, with a cobbled walk curving through, right up to the big blue wooden door with an old brass knocker. The windows were wide and the casements swung outward, and the house was filled with fireplaces. Both Sarah Anne and Judith knew the house from childhood. It looked like a tropical haven in summer, and a Christmas postcard in winter.

"When I grow up I'm going to marry somebody who can be that house," Sarah Anne had said when she was ten.

"Then I'll marry somebody who can build another just like it," Judy had answered.

Now Sarah Anne was genuinely jubilant because one of them had won the gift. She waved goodbye to her friend one evening, and took the train into the nearest large city. Judy would be met by Jack the next day and they would fly back to Perryville. But meantime, Sarah Anne had things to do.

She would spend that check for clothes for herself and Corinne. Then she would keep her promise to visit Corinne, for the college wasn't far.

After that? She did not know. Never in her life had she had four hundred dollars to spend on clothes, until now. She selected a slender black crepe dress, with a round neck and long, full sleeves that were banded at the wrists. A tiny black hat, with an exaggerated veil, added mystery to her face and she wanted it. But she took it off. No, that would do for Corinne, who even at this early age leaned toward the sophisticated. She wrinkled her nose, reflecting that she was the ingenue type and she'd better stick to it.

So she chose the dress, the hat, a crimson-pink suede bag and crushed pink gaiter gloves for Corinne. There was a heavy rope necklace of twisted pink beads that she couldn't resist, either. The costume made a sizeable hole in the check, but she turned back to her own shopping, happier than she had been for days.

In the end she chose a rust-colored bolero suit, with a round white pique collar, and an off-the-face soft felt hat of the same lovely bronze, with a small brown bow that tied where her head met the hat, just as though it belonged to her shining hair. Brown suede pumps, brown gaiter gloves and a pouch bag of matching suede completed that costume.

There was a sheer green woolen frock that would go with the brown accessories, and another of a dark red that could use them, too. For them she bought a brown hat, a quaint 1880 bonnet type, with a couple of colored quills stuck through at a gay angle and a plaid ribbon tying itself into a big bow over her right ear. There was a veil, too.

She did not really need a dinner dress but she bought one because it was gay.

She had wanted a short fur jacket for a long time, without any hope that she would have one. Now she went from place to place until she found a clever fur man who could take the plebian animals and make them emerge as excellent copies of their more expensive fur contemporaries.

She did not really need a dinner dress, but she bought a tricolor one because it was gay, and it would be a rainy over her wardrobe, even if it only rained on a hanger. It was soft and crushable and its top was lime green, its skirt was emerald, and it had a red sash. A two-way hat of rosy crimson that would brighten a navy suit from last autumn, which was simple and good, was chosen, and new blue walking shoes with rounded toes and a crosswork of straps.

Matching gloves of the same bright crimson, curiously softened, a flat blue bag, a couple of sweaters, some underthings and stockings and a flowered negligee, and she was done. She had only fifty cents left of the money she had been given. Never in her life had she been so extravagant, never had she had a new wardrobe such as this.

She had left word for the packages to be sent to the hotel where she had taken a room, and now she went into a confectionary to spend that last half dollar on some cinnamon toast and a pot of hot tea. The waitress led her to a small table next to the wall, and she relaxed. There were soft lights, many people speaking in low, happy voices, velvet cords which kept out those who were waiting for tables, and music came from somewhere and made a softening curtain for the tinkle of ice and the quiet chime of the silver.

Waiting for her order, Sarah Anne opened a newspaper that she had bought. Then she forgot the new clothes, the pot of welcome tea, the campus where Corinne would meet her presently. A headline grew to gigantic proportions before her eyes:

"ELEVEN DIE IN CRASH OF STRATOLINER ON TEST FLIGHT"

The story said that a 33-passenger plane had plunged into a ravine. It was said by some that a wing had fallen off. Others believed the tail had broken in two. Eleven people had been killed.

Wide-eyed, Sarah noted that the giant ship had been built to fly at 20,000 feet. Twenty thousand feet! It was higher than that which she must go if she made the stratosphere jump. Yet curiously she felt no fear of that. Only a terrible sense of the tragedy that had befallen these pioneers in the sky.

Drinking the strong tea, eating the sweetened toast, she reminded herself that for any progress there must be sacrifice. Trails above the earth could not go, feet and safe and shining, until some paid the price of discovery and took the first far rides. The western lands of the world would not be lush and fertile if the pioneers had not gone boldly into danger, dying or living that a new land might raise tall towers to quiet skies.

This was the work Robert Kennedy loved. It was Jack's chosen field, too. Not either of them could ever belong to anyone. Not to a woman. Not to themselves. Just to the heights forever above them. Yet that which a woman received from them held infinite importance. And her own flying?

Her cheeks burned now in the great room where so many people sat, although there was none among them who knew her story. She had not flown because she had a mission. She had flown as an escape. It had been a sensational, rather shoddy thing to do. And it had taken this calamity to show her!

Once her father had said in a sermon: "A man or woman has a right to risk his life only when the resulting progress, the ultimate good, merits the sacrifice."

If she had been dashed to earth that day the parachute rip cord had been useless in her frightened hand, would the sky have been a safer place for others? She left her tip, picked up her check, and went back to the hotel. She no longer felt brave. The wings had ceased their humming. Whatever one did, wherever one went, there must be a reason.

In that moment she forgot that Robert Kennedy had not trusted her. She knew only that she wanted to see him, to tell him she understood the sky now, at last, when she was leaving it.

One-Minute Test

1. What president of the United States married Grace Anna Goodhue?
2. What is orography?
3. Who was the Roman goddess of chance?

Words of Wisdom

"But" is a word that cools many a warm impulse, stifles many a kindly thought, puts a dead stop to many a brotherly deed. No one would ever love his neighbor as himself if he listened to all the "buts" that could be said.—Bulwer.

Today's Horoscope

The person whose birthday is today must be cautioned against carelessness in correspondence. If due care is exercised and bring promotion. A child born on this date will be clever and originate, but too fond of ease to achieve the success his or her abilities promise. Marriage will make or mar his or her life.

Hints on Etiquette

If you make a business call, make your remarks brief and to the point, but do not rush through them as if you have to make a train. State your case quickly and plainly.

Horoscope for Sunday

If your birthday is today your business prospects are favorable, and your industry will be rewarded. Be careful, however, of your dealings with the opposite sex.

The child born on this date will be very intellectual, artistic and possess unusual literary ability, but will be short-tempered and somewhat erratic.

THE PROPOSED BOYCOTT

THERE is serious talk of "cracking down" on Japan with an official boycott. American citizens are exasperated with Japan's actions, both in the war against China and the movement to push Occidentals out of Asia. More and more people are coming to feel that something drastic needs to be done to stop Japanese aggression and arrogance.

Enthusiasm for a boycott should not be allowed to obliterate from our minds the complete significance and seriousness of such a move, or its possible consequences. The Japanese would be greatly offended by it. They would consider it a definitely unfriendly act. It would constitute a form of war. It would cost us at once over $150,000,000 business with Japan. It might lead soon to sharper disputes between the two governments, and eventually to actual war. It would be abandonment of the neutrality we now profess.

These are merely points to be considered. They are not listed as arguments against the proposed boycott but as aids to foreseeing and preparing for the situation which would be created by it. Look before you leap is sound advice to legislators and nations as well as to individuals.

A TENOR AND AN ANTHEM

IT has long been known that The Star-Spangled Banner is a difficult song for the average citizen to sing, although large groups make a stirring thing of it with the aid of a good leader and a lively band. Still, no one has considered the national anthem beyond the skill of a professional singer.

It comes, therefore, as a shock to read that a famous American-born tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company is about to file suit in a Federal District Court attacking the legality of a resolution of Congress in 1931 making The Star-Spangled Banner the national anthem.

The song, he maintains, is a painful tonsil-twister. The singer dislikes not only its difficult range but also its "vindicative, unpoetic words" and its "Anacreontic origin." The singer even goes so far as to challenge to a fight or a debate a certain band leader who had prepared a simpler version of the music.

All this is nearly as exciting as the reports—due any day—of sea monsters and other hot-weather phenomena. One suspects a close similarity between the tenor-and-anthem story and other silly-season tales. Of course one would never suspect tenor, band leader, or their agents of cooking up a merry little publicity stunt.

ADMINISTRATION SEEKS PURGE

WASHINGTON—Here are two scenes highly important to the national well-being which indicate the grim-visaged, clean-up policy being followed by the Roosevelt Administration today—a big change from three scant years ago.

SCENE 1 took place in the Mayflower Hotel in Washington in the Spring of 1936. The scene opens in the room of Seymour Weiss, recently indicted by a federal grand jury for selling hotel furnishings twice to the Louisiana State University. Weiss was Huey Long's supporter, financial backer, and mentor. Like Huey he had been bitterly opposed to Roosevelt, but now Huey was dead and Weiss, together with other Long supporters, was charged by the Government with income tax evasion.

Weiss paid only $1,239.43 taxes from 1929 to 1933, a pitifully small sum considering that he was a big shot in Louisiana and the Government claimed taxes of $27,070.16.

On this particular day Seymour Weiss was pacing the floor and rubbing his hands through his sparse hair.

"That dirty dog of a Jew," burred Weiss, who is Jewish himself, "he wants to crucify me. He won't listen to reason. He'll convict his own mother if he thought she was wrong."

"You're not referring by any chance to the Secretary of the Treasury, are you?" asked Harry Costello, a newspaperman who had been a close friend of Huey Long's.

"He's the only man spoiling my deal," moaned Weiss. "He wants to crucify me."

"Have you talked to Farley?" asked Costello. "Maybe he could do something for you."

"Yes, I talked to him, and he was non-committal."

The scene now shifts, later in the same day, to the White House where Harry Costello called upon Marvin MacIntyre, his former city editor on the Washington Times.

"Mac," said Costello, "did it ever occur to you that the Administration might arrange a rapprochement with the gang down in Louisiana. If so, I think I could be of some service to you."

"I think that's already being taken care of, Harry."

"Then no one has to worry?" asked Costello.

"No one," replied the President's secretary.

A few days later the Justice Department wired the district attorney in New Orleans to drop criminal action against Seymour Weiss and others. Instead he paid a penalty tax of $12,915.37. A few weeks later, Seymour Weiss and other politicians voted Louisiana's twenty delegates emphatically for Roosevelt at the 1936 Democratic National Convention. "Roosevelt's good enough for me," announced Seymour to newspaper reporters.

NOTE—Henry Morgenthau is reported to have threatened to resign as Secretary of the Treasury over the incident but was pacified by Roosevelt.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to another morning that carried the feel of Autumn. Wonder whether we will have an early one? Scanned the morning prints over a cup of coffee and then by wagon headed for the post, there to meet T. P. Brown, the insurance man, who will be eighty in a few days. At the plant found everything moving smoothly, so did head out over the paves by foot.

There goes Gardener Harold Grant. It was early last Spring when Harold decided he should have a flower garden. He bought seeds of many varieties, collected others from friends, prepared the ground and one day placed the seeds in carefully prepared trenches. Then, up came a great wind. Harold says that today when he sees a flower anywhere in the ville, regardless of how far it is from his home, he is inclined to claim it. A half dozen plants grew and he transplanted them, spaded the ground once more, consulted Howard Orr, the canner, and then planted lima beans. "Everyone laughed when I went out there with the seed," Harold says, "but they all come to me now for beans." All except me. I'd rather keep on laughing.

Bugs McCrady once was with a circus and has many tales of interest when he can be started on the subject. Once the circus men engaged in battle in a restaurant following an afternoon show and several of the townies were rather roughly treated. That night following the performance Bugs was hungry and decided to get something to eat. He was in the restaurant of trouble before he realized where he was. The restaurant was practically out of food, but Bugs finally got four bananas and walked out with two in each hand. As he left a big man approached him and said: "So, you are one of those wise guys with that circus, eh?" Bugs denied the alleged fact and finally convinced the belligerent citizen. As the man walked away Bugs thought of his food, looked down and saw that he had nothing left but skins in his hand. Well, he had lost his appetite anyway, so that wasn't so important.

Attended the Retail Merchants Association meeting at noon in the hotel and was agreeably surprised by the large attendance. Usually those sessions attract only four or five. That organization if given cooperation of the majority of local merchants can do much toward improving local business conditions.

Met Frank Lynch, prime mover of the playground movement, and learned that the money is not coming in as rapidly as he would like. Everyone should contribute to that cause. And to prove it Frank and the scrivener will go out in a day or two and take pictures of youngsters in spots where they now play.

Sun Is an Aid; Not a Cure-All

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

I CAME across a curious piece of lore the other day in the form of a quotation from Herodotus. He had visited a famous battlefield where the Persians had fought with the Egyptians. Among the skulls scattered around he noticed that the skull bones of the Persians were very thin. You could throw stones through them. But the Egyptian skulls were thick and hard. He ascribed this difference to the fact that the Egyptians exposed their bare heads to the sun. They not only had no headgear, but even shaved the head. The result was a thicker and tougher cranium.

I cannot agree with Herodotus, even assuming that he had his facts right. There is no reason to suppose that sunlight has any effect on the skull bones directly. It would be much easier to explain the circumstance by heredity. If it were true that there was a difference in the thickness of the Persian and Egyptian crania, it could have been produced by breeding.

Many of us ascribe powers to the sun which it does not possess. The effect of sunlight on hair growth is practically nothing one way or another. There is a large school of thought that holds to the doctrine that baldness is due to wearing hats and keeping the scalp from being exposed to the sun and air. But an equally vigorous school maintains that sunlight is bad for the hair. Actual experiments, however, have been made which prove that it has no effect on the hair one way or the other.

Sunlight is real medicine though for certain diseases. It is a necessary factor in life. The most noticeable effects are obtained by Rollier, the Swiss physician, in treating tuberculosis of the bones and joints. Practically no other treatment was used and with most of his patients he dispensed with casts or other forms of support of every kind. Fistulas and discharging sinuses healed up and stopped running, the bones healed and the general health was vastly improved.

It is notable, however, that another form of tuberculosis, of the lungs, is not improved; in fact, usually is made worse by too much exposure to sunlight.

Rickets Related

The disease which is particularly related to sunlight, however, is rickets. This disease of children only is caused by the inability of the body to utilize the calcium and phosphorus salts in building bones. Even when there is plenty of calcium and phosphorus in the food, it cannot be utilized unless there is also the vitamin called vitamin D. Vitamin D is made in animal bodies by the effect of sunshine on the skin. Vitamin D is formed in the skin as a result of exposure to sunlight, is carried to the liver and stored there until it is needed. Rickets is, therefore, a disease of darkness and dark seasons. Take advantage of your summer sun and store up plenty of it against the dark days of next winter.

Children who get plenty of sunshine while their permanent teeth are coming in are less apt to have molar teeth decay in after years, according to British researchers.

Sun bathing and air bathing together make for vigorous health. But sun bathing can be overdone, especially by the vacationer who thinks he has to get a whole season's tan in the first few days of his vacation. Not only may a bad skin burn result; headache and insomnia may follow.

All people have regarded the sun with veneration; for the ancient Egyptians it was one of their principal gods. The Greeks and Romans had special temples of the sun. It is a good sign of our own times that an interest in outdoor life is returning, and all classes are responding to it.

Mrs. J. H. M.: "I would like to know if parsley-garlic is a good treatment for high blood pressure. I have tried drugs to no effect."

Answer: Neither parsley nor garlic, nor a combination, has any effect on high blood pressure. Neither have drugs. High blood pressure is an adjustment of the body to new conditions caused by a decrease in the elasticity and adaptability of the arteries. The only effective treatment is to reduce activity, worry and overeating.

M. B.: "What is palpitation of the heart? What causes it? Is it dangerous? Is there a cure for it?"

Answer: Palpitation of the heart is consciousness of the heart's action. In people over 40 it is common to have the heart miss a beat every now and then. This is usually noticeable, and constitutes palpitation. It is not dangerous. Treatment should be mostly psychological, consisting in an assurance that there is no danger.

J. S.: "Is there any remedy for weak ankles? I am 15 years old and do a bit of hiking and I have no bother with my ankles then, but in the winter when I attempt to skate they become tired and swell."

Answer: Skating puts a very severe strain on the ankles and calves, evidently more than you can stand just now. Exercises to strengthen the ankle muscles should be used first. Remember the muscles that stiffen the ankles are in the calves. Rising on the toes 50 to 100 times and then on the heels, morning and evening, should help.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. ## Wings of Youth

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

THE AUTOMATIC parachute, which Robert Kennedy had ordered for Sarah Anne, reached her a few days before she and Judith kept their last engagement. She tested it in the morning and admitted truthfully that it was safer. Her hand had not failed her since the day when Jack and Robert had been unexpected visitors, but the fear of such a repetition was gone now.

That same day brought a check from Miss Sarah and Miss Anne. The two old ladies had tried to make her accept the day dress she was at home, but she had refused, because they had been so generous to her family. The accompanying note said:

"Sarah Anne, it's not much, but take it and buy yourself some clothes. Nothing gives a woman the lift that a new hat does. Once I had a beau who turned me down because I dressed to plain and landsakes, I bought a new dress and hat, the fanciest things on the market, and in one week I had him and three others sitting on the front porch. Your clothes are nice, but it's about time you didn't have to hunt in bargain basements. This is all to be used for clothes, mind you. We'll expect to see them."

"Love to our namesake."

"SARAH MOFFET."

Judith was happy and excited. Her father had sent her the deed to a low, sprawling house half way up a hill, near the airport. It had a terrace that looked down on a small lake, and the hillside was a flower garden, with a cobbled walk curving through, right up to the big blue wooden door with an old brass knocker. The windows were wide and the casements swung outward, and the house was filled with fireplaces. Both Sarah Anne and Judith knew the house from childhood. It looked like a tropical haven in summer, and a Christmas postcard in winter.

"When I grow up I'm going to marry somebody who can buy that house," Sarah Anne had said when she was ten.

"Then I'll marry somebody who can build another just like it," Judy had answered.

Now Sarah Anne was genuinely jubilant because one of them had won the gift. She had said goodby to her friend one evening, and took the train into the nearest large city. Judy would be met by Jack the next day and they would fly back to Perryville. But meantime, Sarah Anne had things to do.

She would spend that check for clothes for herself and Corrinne. Then she would keep her promise to visit Corrinne, for the college wasn't far.

After that? She did not know. Never in her life had she had four hundred dollars to spend on clothes, until now. She selected a sheer black crepe dress, with a round neck and long, full sleeves that were banded at the wrists. A tiny black hat, with an exaggerated veil, added mystery to her face and she wanted it. But she took it off. No, that would do for Corrinne, who even at this early age leaned toward the sophisticated. She wrinkled her nose, reflecting that she was the ingenuite type and she'd better stick to it.

So she chose the dress, the hat, a cyclamen-pink suede bag, a crushed pink gauntlet glove for Corrinne. There was a heavy rope necklace of twisted pink beads that she couldn't resist, either. The costume made a sizeable hole in the check, but she turned back to her own shopping, happier than she had been for days.

In the end she chose a rust-colored bolero suit, with a round white pique collar, and an off-the-face pink hat of the same lovely bronze, with a small brown bow that tied where her head met the hat, just as though it belonged on her shining hair. Brown suede pumps, brown gauntlet gloves and a pouch bag of matching suede completed that costume.

There was a sheer green woolen frock that would, with the brown accessories, and another of a dark red that could use them, too. For them she bought a brown hat, a quaint 1860 bonnet type, with a couple of colored quills stuck through at a gay angle and a plaid ribbon tying itself into a big bow over her right ear. There was a veil, too.

She had wanted a short fur jacket for a long time, without any hope that she would have one. Now she went from place to place until she found a clever fur man who could take the plebian animals and make them emerge as excellent copies of their more expensive fur contemporaries.

She did not really need a dinner dress, but she bought a tricolor one because it was gay, and it would cast a rainbow over her wardrobe, even if it only rested on a hanger. It was soft and crushable and its top was lime green, its skirt was emerald, and it had a red sash. A two-way hat of rosy crimson that would brighten a navy suit from last autumn, which was simple and good, was chosen, and new blue walking shoes with rounded toes and a crosswork of straps.

Matching gloves of the same bright crimson, curiously softened, a flat blue bag, a couple of sweaters, some underthings and stockings and a flowered negligee, and she was done. She had only fifty cents left of the money she had been given. Never in her life had she been so extravagant, never had she had a new wardrobe such as this.

She had left word for the packages to be sent to the hotel where she had taken a room, and now she went into a confectionary to spend that last half dollar on some cinnamon toast and a pot of hot tea. The waitress led her to a small table next to the wall, and she relaxed. There were soft lights, many people speaking in low, happy voices, velvet cords which kept out those who were waiting for tables, and music came from somewhere and made a softening curtain for theinkle of ice and the quiet chime of the silver.

Waiting for her order, Sarah Anne opened a newspaper that she had bought. Then she forgot the new clothes, the pot of welcome tea, the campus where Corrinne would meet her presently. A headline grew to gigantic proportions before her eyes:

"ELEVEN DIE IN CRASH OF STRATOLINER ON TEST FLIGHT"

The story said that a 33-passenger plane had plunged into a ravine. It was said by some that a wing had fallen off. Others believed the tail had broken in two. Eleven people had been killed.

Wide-eyed, Sarah noted that the giant ship had been built to fly at 20,000 feet. Twenty thousand feet! It was higher than that which she must go if she made the stratosphere jump. Yet curiously she felt no fear of that. Only a terrible sense of the tragedy that had befallen these pioneers in the sky.

Drinking the strong tea, eating the sweetened toast, she reminded herself that for any progress there must be sacrifice. Trails above the earth could not go, fleet and safe and shining, until some paid the price of discovery and took the first far rides. The western lands of the world would not be lush and fertile if the pioneers had not gone boldly into danger, dying or living that a new land might raise tall towers to quiet skies.

This was the work Robert Kennedy loved. It was Jack's chosen field, too. Not either of them could ever belong to anyone. Not to a woman. Not to themselves. Just to the heights forever above them. Yet that which a woman received from them held infinite importance. And her own flying?

Her cheeks burned now in the great room where so many people sat, although there was none among them who knew her story.

She had not flown because she had a mission. She had flown as an escape. It had been a sensational, rather shoddy thing to do. And it had taken this calamity to show her!

Once her father had said in a sermon: "A man or woman has a right to risk his life only when the resulting progress, the ultimate good, merits the sacrifice."

If she had been dashed to earth that day the parachute rip cord had been useless in her frightened hand, would the sky have been a safer place for others? She left her tip, picked up her check, and went back to the hotel. She no longer felt brave. The wings had ceased their humming. Whatever one did, wherever one went, there must be a reason.

In that moment she forgot that Robert Kennedy had not trusted her. She knew only that she wanted to see him, to tell him she understood the sky now, at last, when she was leaving it.

"But" is a word that cools many a warm impulse, stifles many a kindly thought, puts a dead stop to many a brotherly deed. No one would ever love his neighbor as himself if he listened to all the "buts" that could be said.—Bulwer.

Today's Horoscope

The person whose birthday is today must be cautioned against carelessness in correspondence. If due care is exercised and bring promotion. A child born on this date will be clever and originate, but too fond of ease to achieve the success his or her abilities promise. Marriage will make or mar his or her life.

Hints on Etiquette

If you make a business call, make your remarks brief and to the point, but do not rush through them as if you have to make a train. State your case quickly and plainly.

Horoscope for Sunday

If your birthday is today your business prospects are favorable, and your industry will be rewarded. Be careful, however, of your feelings with the opposite sex.

ite Fohl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
Lewis J. Fohl of N. Pickaway street, Saturday, became the bride of Mr. Dwight Burns Weiler of N. Washington street. The impressive single ring service of the Presbyterian church was read by the Rev. Robert T. Kelsey in the manse on E. Mound street at 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. E. W. Weiler and Miss Dorothy Fohl, sisters of the bride, and Miss Betty Weiler and Mr.
Vernon Weiler, sister and brother of the bridegroom, were the only attendants at the ceremony.

A large brimmed navy blue hat and matching accessories completed Miss Fohl's costume, with which she wore a shoulder corsage of pink rose buds and blue del-phinium.

Immediately after the service,
the couple left for Petersburg,
W. Va., where they were entertained at a wedding dinner by Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Smith. Mrs.
Smith will be remembered in Circleville as the former Elizabeth Groce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
H. H. Groce of E. Union street.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Weiler will enjoy a ten day stay at Virginia Beach before returning home.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Weiler are graduates of Circleville high school. Mrs. Weiler now being a teacher in the Corwin street school. Mr. Weiler is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and attended Ohio State university, Columbus. He is the owner of Weiler's Grocery, corner of Pickaway and Watt streets, formerly operated by his father.

They will make their home for the present with the bride's parents, Mrs. Weiler planning to continue as a teacher for the next year.

Kiger-Teegardin Engagement

Of interest to their Circleville friends will be the announcement of the engagement of Miss Grace Louise Teegardin of near Ashville and Mr. George Melvin Kiger, son of Mrs. Charles F. Kiger and the late Mr. Kiger of Pickaway township. The wedding will be an event of Friday, Aug. 25.

Miss Teegardin, the daughter of Mrs. C. B. Teegardin and the late
Mr. Teegardin of the Ashville community, is supervisor of music in the Circleville public schools.
She is a graduate of Ohio State

Today's Fashion

BEACH WEAR changes year after year. When we count on using last season's swim suit and sand togs, we are soon disillusioned. Fortunately, the new shore styles are modestly priced. Here's a play suit, square-necked and zipped up the back, in rose cotton. Over it buttons a high-waisted skirt in navy and rose, the backgrounds alternated. The peaked kerchief visor ties at one side.

ALTHOUGH Joe E. Brown's middle initial doesn't stand for Entertainment, his new picture "Flirting with Fate," which opened at the Circle theatre Sunday certainly does. For the film is crammed with inspired comedy, thrills that had the audience holding on to their seats, and the best Joe E. Brown pantomime which has been seen in the stellar comedian's pictures in some time.
Brown is a clown incarnate, touched with that rare genius for grotesquerie that gives all great pantomimists their immortality.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Troy White of W.
Mound street accompanied by Mr.
and Mrs. Tenice Stinson of Indianapolis, Ind., left Friday for Bon-field, Ontario, where they will enson, who was joined by Mr. Stinson Friday, had been spending the week with her sisters, Mrs. Fred Roundhouse and Miss Dorothy Bartley, of W. Water street and other relatives in Circleville.

Mrs. G. S. Corne of N. Court street accompanied by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs.
Emor Larick of Chillicothe and sister, Mrs. Elias Delong, of Kingston will leave Sunday for a trip through the West. The group plans to visit Yellowstone National Park, the Grand Canyon, Salt Lake City, Pike's Peak and many other points of interest.

Mrs. Olive Logsdon, Mrs. Elmer Mallory and Miss Louise Carley of Ashville were Friday visitors in Circleville.

Miss Frances Hill of Williams-

GARDEN-GRAPH

Bleaching Cauliflower Heads

To keep them white the heads or curds of cauliflower must be bleached by protecting them from the sun. It is important to cover them early, for if they once turn color from exposure nothing can be done to whiten them.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, the large outer leaves should be tied up over the heads when they first begin to develop. Tie the leaves together with raffin, being careful not to bruise or break them, since they must continue to grow.

Cultivation of young cauliflower plants must be done carefully so the foliage is brittle and breaks easily. Remember also that the roots run near the surface so that cultivation must be shallow.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When buying dotted curtains, make sure that the dots are woven into the material so that they will not pull or wash out when laundried.

To eradicate rust spots, try this:
Dissolve two parts of salt or lemon in 88 parts distilled or rain water, add 10 parts of glycerine and filter. Moisten the rust spots with this solution and let it lie for three hours, rubbing the mois-tened spot frequently during this time. Then wash thoroughly with water.

12-HOUR WORKING DAY

TOKYO.—A maximum working day of 12 hours for males over 16 years of age has been introduced in Japanese factories in five specific industries. This is the first attempt made in Japan to regulate the working hours of male labor on a national scale.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES,
O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: Please suggest a good evergreen hedge.

ANSWER: The evergreens best adapted for a hedge here in Ohio are the hemlock, Japanese yew, Cannan juniper, Douglas arborvitae, giant arborvitae. You might also use Euonymus vegetus for a broadleaf evergreen. If the hedge will be in the shade the yew or the hemlock or the Euonymus would be the most satisfactory.

QUESTION: How do you apply a 10-6-4 grass fertilizer to the lawn without burning the grass?

ANSWER: As long as you do not put on an overdose there should be no burning. Two pounds to 100 square feet is ample. Although this may be broadcast by hand, it is much easier to put it on with the regular lawn fertilizer spreader.

QUESTION: What kind of evergreen tree is used most for Christmas trees?

ANSWER: If you are to grow the trees here in Ohio you will find Norway spruce best, but if you are buying the trees for your own use the Balsam fir is preferred because it does not shed needles as does the spruce. The fir, however, cannot be satisfactorily grown here in this state.

QUESTION: Some time ago
you recommended that I purchase Sorbaria aitchisoni. How does this differ from Sorbaria sorbifolia?

ANSWER: The false spirea or Sorbaria is usually sold as a spirea by many nurseries. The old-fashioned form, sorbifolia, grows about four feet high, blooms in June and suckers badly. The newer form, aitchisoni, grows seven to ten feet high, blooms in July and does not ordinarily sucker to the extent of the older variety.
It is usually considered preferable.
In a severe Winter it might die back to the ground but, blooming as late as it does, it will grow up as tall as it was the previous season.

QUESTION: Would you advise the use of sulfur around around the rhododendrons?

ANSWER: Sulfur is used to acidify the soil and if your rhododendrons are growing in a soil that is not naturally acid, it can be used to advantage. However, the amount can only be determined after your soil has been tested and its reaction determined. If you will take a sample to your county agricultural agent, he will be glad to see that it is tested.

QUESTION: Is there any advantage in dusting roses just after spraying?

ANSWER: I can see absolutely no reason for dusting them since your spray should contain the necessary ingredients to control diseases as well as insects. Your dust also should contain these same things. Incidentally, I find that dusting is slightly easier and more convenient than spraying.
Your roses should be dusted at least once a week and after every rain. A mixture of 9 parts dusting sulfur, 1 part arsenate of lead and 2 parts rotenone or pyrethrum dust is very efficient, so long as the temperature is not over 95 degrees.

QUESTION: Is there any shrub which could be used as a screen between the road and the house under an elm tree 10 years old?

ANSWER: Yes, you will find any of the shrubs tolerant of shade will grow under this condition. I would particularly recommend five-leaf aralia, Tatarian honeysuckle, Morrow honeysuckle, flowering currant, Itoha privet, European privet. Among the vi-burnums the only one you would find entirely satisfactory due to the dry condition of the soil would be the wayfaring tree, Viburnum lantana.

QUESTION: Is it necessary to plant the wintercreeper, Ilex verticillata, in pairs to produce berries?

ANSWER: Yes, a male and female plant are necessary, however, one male plant will do for a whole group of females.

QUESTION: Is a firethorn
hardy in the vicinity of Akron?

ANSWER: Yes, however, the firethorn is best planted in the Spring and should always have a ball of earth or else be in pots.
I would not plant one much larger than two feet in diameter.

QUESTION: What time of the year is safest to transplant a mountain ash? Mine has been planted in a shady place and it is thin and spindly.

ANSWER: The mountain ash may be planted or transplanted in either Fall or Spring. I believe you will find it will be much more satisfactory growing in the sun, however than in the shade.

QUESTION: Will Euonymus (wintercreeper) on a stone wall burn in the Winter sun?

ANSWER: The various forms of wintercreeper (Euonymus radi-cans) are perfectly hardy and will not burn in the Winter sun.
However, you will often be sold another form of Euonymus (Euonymus patens) which will usually burn and shed its leaves during January or February.

QUESTION: Are dwarf fruit trees practical for the small home grounds?

ANSWER: I do not feel that many fruit trees are practical for the home garden, with the exception of sour cherries, unless you are willing to carry on a regular spray program to keep the tree and the fruit healthy. If you are particularly interested in fruit trees you will be willing to do this and to use the trees as you would any other small tree in the landscape planting, then you will receive sufficient enjoyment from them to make them worthwhile.
May I suggest that you ask your local county agricultural agent for a copy of our various bulletins on fruit growing. This will show you what you must contend with in the way of insects and diseases.

QUESTION: What can I do for chiggers? Every time I go out in the garden I get another bunch of them.

ANSWER: The chiggers are little mites that are on your bushes and in the long grass. Like most of these mites, they are rather easily killed by sulfur. I find that mixing equal parts of talcum powder and dusting sulfur and applying it to myself is easier than sulfering the whole garden and trying to kill all of them.

QUESTION: We have just moved into a new home and would like to get the front lawn started. Would you recommend that I seed it now or sod it?

ANSWER: It is absolutely too late for Spring seeding and is too early for Fall seeding. It will be possible for you to sod it but remember, to save the sod, you will have to water it heavily to a depth of three or four inches every week or 10 days throughout the rest of the Summer.

QUESTION: What is the best time to transplant rose bushes and how do you cut slips from them and when? I would also like to know how to thin out my hedge.

ANSWER: The Fall is the best time of the year to plant rose bushes. They can be successfully planted in the Spring provided adequate care is given as far as watering and pruning are concerned.

MARKING his first appearance on the screen in three years, Johnny Weissmuller comes to the Cliftona theatre starting Sunday in his famous role of Tarzan, King of the Jungle, in the latest adventures of the Edgar Rice Burroughs hero, "Tarzan Finds a Son!" Maureen O'Sullivan is once again seen as his mate, Jane, and an exciting new character is introduced in the person of five-year-old John Sheffield as "Tarzan, Jr." who emulates Weissmuller's athletic and underwater swimming feats.

—But It's The Cook Who Prepares All The Meals

IT IS ALWAYS good to remember how science and industry keep busy providing us with nice fresh foods. Advanced methods of refrigeration, quick-freeze, canning in shining cans or preserving in gleaming glass jars; rushing foods by fast train and truck—all these contribute to our daily fare. So it's three cheers for the brilliant scientists and industrialists concerned with foods, and a rousing "tiger" for the smart gals who whip up these foods into delightful dishes. And here we come with some recipes as our little share in this food business:

New England Bran Muffins are ever so good. Half cup molasses, two cups bran, one and one-half cups milk, one egg, one cup flour, one-half teaspoon salt and one teaspoon soda will yield a dozen muff-ins. Add bran to molasses and milk, and allow to soak for 15 minutes. Beat egg and add to first mixture. Sift flour, salt and soda together, and combine with bran mixture. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.)
about 20 minutes.

This recipe for stuffed eggs has reached us from California. It is made with six hard-boiled eggs, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon black pepper, one-fourth teaspoon dry mustard, one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one and one-half teaspoons grated onion, two teaspoons butter (melted), tablespoon chili powder, one-fourth teaspoon celery seeds, one-fourth cup mayonnaise and eight ripe olives, chopped. Cut the eggs in lengthwise halves. Remove yolks and rub through sieve. Add remaining ingredients except mayonaisse and olives. Add mayonaisse and beat until fluffy, then add the olives. Refill egg whites.

Baked Beans
Want a grand baked beans recipe for that picnic? Get together two cups pea beans, one-fourth teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup dark corn syrup, two ounces salt pork, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one-half teaspoon dry mustard and one small onion, peeled. Wash beans and soak overnight in cold water. Next morning, add soda and cook beans in same water until skins begin to loosen.
Place one-half of the salt pork, sliced, in bottom of bean pot; add one-half the beans and half the seasonings; add remaining beans and seasonings; bury onion in beans. Pour corn syrup over top; cover with salt pork. Add boiling water slowly until it seeps through beans to top. Cover and bake in a slow oven for about four hours or longer, until liquid is absorbed.

Sonia Canape has consented to act as a windup to this recipe parade. Mash contents of a can of Norwegian sardines with prepared mustard, lemon juice and a drop of onion juice. Spread thickly on crisp, salted crackers, dot with butter and put in oven until heated through.

QUESTION: Driving past a nice home with a lovely garden the other day, I saw some big yellow lily-like flowers about two feet high blooming in their flower border. Can you give me any idea what these might be?

ANSWER: You probably saw some of the newer varieties of daylilies or Hemerocallis. You yourself probably have the early one, the Lemon Lily. Among the newer varieties which I would suggest you try are Hyperion, J. A. Crawford, Bay State, Mrs.
Austin, Anna Betscher, and Sir Michael Foster. There are many others. You will find they are usually satisfactory because they are absolutely hardy, easily grown, and dependable in bloom.

QUESTION: I have a very lovely maple tree in my lawn but this year for the first time there are a number of irregular black spots on the leaves. Is this serious? Is there anything I can do for it?

ANSWER: There are several leaf spot diseases of maples which are more common some seasons than others. They are seldom serious although they may defoliate the tree earlier than usual. You can check them by spraying with one of the copper sprays such as coposil, Cupro K, or bordeaux mixture. May I also suggest that as the leaves fall they be raked and burned to prevent possible reinfection next year?

QUESTION: What is the best time to transplant rose bushes and
how do you cut slips from them
and when? I would also like to know how to thin out my hedge.

ANSWER: The Fall is the best
time of the year to plant rose bushes. They can be successfully planted in the Spring provided adequate care is given as far as watering and pruning are concerned.

Marguerite Fohl Bride Of Mr. Dwight B. Weiler

Single Ring Vows
In Charge Of
Rev. Kelsey

Social Calendar

Wearing an attractive costume suit of dusty pink, Miss Marguerite Fohl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Fohl of N. Pickaway street, Saturday, became the bride of Mr. Dwight Burns Weiler of N. Washington street. The impressive single ring service of the Presbyterian church was read by the Rev. Robert T. Kelsey in the manse on E. Mound street at 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. E. W. Weiler and Miss Dorothy Fohl, sisters of the bride, and Miss Betty Weiler and Mr. Vernon Weiler, sister and brother of the bridegroom, were the only attendants at the ceremony.

A large brimmed navy blue hat and matching accessories completed Miss Fohl's costume, with which she wore a shoulder corsage of pink rose buds and blue delphinium.

Immediately after the service, the couple left for Petersburg, W. Va., where they were entertained at a wedding dinner by Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Smith. Mrs. Smith will be remembered in Circleville as the former Elizabeth Groce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Groce of E. Union street.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Weiler will enjoy a ten day stay at Virginia Beach before returning home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Weiler are graduates of Circleville high school. Mrs. Weiler now being a teacher in the Corwin street school. Mr. Weiler is a graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and attended Ohio State university, Columbus. He is the owner of Weiler's Grocery, corner of Pickaway and Watt streets, formerly operated by his father. They will make their home for the present with the bride's parents, Mrs. Weiler planning to continue as a teacher for the next year.

Kiger-Teegardin Engagement

Of interest to their Circleville friends will be the announcement of the engagement of Miss Grace Louise Teegardin of near Ashville and Mr. George Melvin Kiger, son of Mrs. Charles F. Kiger and the late Mr. Kiger of Pickaway township. The wedding will be an event of Friday, Aug. 25.

Miss Teegardin, the daughter of Mrs. C. M. Teegardin and the late Mr. Teegardin of the Ashville community, is supervisor of music in the Circleville public schools. She is a graduate of Ohio State university, Columbus, where she was a member of Delta Gamma sorority, Chimes and Mortar Board.

Mr. Kiger is associated in business with the John W. Eshelman & Sons Co., of Circleville. After their marriage the couple will reside in this city.

Church Picnic

The Ladies' Aid Society and the Brotherhood of the Church of the Brethren enjoyed a picnic meeting Friday at Logan Elm Park, 51 members being present for the occasion.

After the bountiful basket supper at 7 p. m., games were played during the informal social evening.

Today's Fashion

BEACH WEAR changes year after year. When we count on using last season's swim suit and sand togs, we are soon disillusioned. Fortunately, the new shore styles are modestly priced. Here's a play suit, square-necked and zipped up the back, in rose cotton. Over it buttons a high-waisted skirt in navy and rose, the backgrounds alternated. The peaked kerchief visor ties at one side.

FRIDAY
W. C. T. U., COTTAGE MRS.
Charles Gussman, Stoutsville campground, Friday at 3 p. m.

tian Temperance Union will meet Friday at 3 p. m. at the Stoutsville campground, in the cottage of Mrs. Charles Gussman. Each member is requested to take one-half dozen cookies, one-half dozen sandwiches and table service.

Deercreek Garden Club

The Deercreek Garden club met Friday evening in the home of Mrs. T. B. Gephart, Williamsport, with 32 members and five guests present, including Mrs. Ray Temp-ling, Mrs. Walter Hughes and Mrs. Frances Jones, Clarksburg, Mrs. Karl Huls, Toledo, and Miss Twila West of Williamsport.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. J. B. Johnson, president, who presided during the session. The reports of Mrs. William D. Heiskell, secretary, and Mrs. C. W. Hayes, treasurer, were received during the business hour.

"Believe It or Not!" was the title of the paper by Miss Carolyn Boehard in which she discussed flowers and bulbs and their care.

Mrs. F. G. Strickland was program leader using for her topic, "Continuous Bloom in the Garden." The subject she discussed was, "Whose Garden is This?" expressing the idea that each person should plant the things he cared for most and could care for best. She stated that Williamsport should be famous for its individuality as expressed in the gardens of its citizens.

During the social hour, refreshments were served by the hostess and members of her assisting committee including Mrs. Harry McGhee and Mrs. Heiskell. Mrs. McGhee and Mrs. Strickland poured at the table which was centered with a large bowl of roses.

The next meeting of the club will be Aug. 24, the place to be announced later.

Magic Sewing Club

Members of the Magic Sewing Club were entertained by Mrs. Gail Wolfe Thursday afternoon in her home in Saltcreek township. Games were played after a pleasant hour of sewing and visiting.

Refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the meeting.

The club will meet Thursday, Aug. 3, in the home of Mrs. Russell Skaggs of S. Pickaway street.

Ashville Dinner-Bridge

Honoring Colonel and Mrs. Robert Sprague Beightler of 1765 King avenue, Columbus, Major and Mrs. Adolph Stelhorn and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Brannan, 1695 Glenn avenue, Columbus, will be hosts at a dinner and bridge party Saturday, July 29, at the Stelhorn country home near Ashville.

Colonel and Mrs. Beightler, who was Miss Claire Springer, were married June 26 in Washington, D. C.

George F. Grand-Girard of N. Washington street returned home Friday after a week's vacation which he passed with his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Grand-Girard and family of Sharon, Pa., and his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pope, and family of Youngstown.

Mrs. Noah Spangler of W. High street and Mrs. Clara Belle Spangler and daughter, Nancy, of Columbus returned home Friday from Indiana where they had been visiting. Mrs. Noah Spangler was the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moore, of Mitchell and Mrs. Spangler and daughter had been sojourning at Spring Mill Hotel.

Mrs. Don W. White of 415 S. Court street returned Friday after a brief visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hathaway, of Chillicothe.

Miss Anna Mae Lockard of Columbus is spending the weekend in Circleville, as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Lockard, of E. Main street.

ALTHOUGH Joe E. Brown's middle initial doesn't stand for Entertainment, his new picture "Flirting with Fate," which opened at the Circle theatre Sunday certainly does. For the film is crammed with inspired comedy, thrills that had the audience holding on to their seats, and the best Joe E. Brown pantomime which has been seen in the stellar comedian's pictures in some time. Brown is a clown incarnate, touched with that rare genius for grotesquerie that gives all great pantomimists their immortality.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Troy White of W. Mound street accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Tenice Stinson of Indianapolis, Ind., left Friday for Bonfield, Ontario, where they will enjoy a week's camping and fishing at Lake Nonsbushing. Mrs. Stinson, who was joined by Mr. Stinson Friday, had been spending the week with her sisters, Mrs. Fred Roundhouse and Miss Dorothy Bartley, of W. Water street and other relatives in Circleville.

Mrs. G. S. Corne of N. Court street accompanied by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Emor Larriek of Chillicothe and sister, Mrs. Elias Delong, of Kingston will leave Sunday for a trip through the West. The group plans to visit Yellowstone National Park, the Grand Canyon, Salt Lake City, Pike's Peak and many other points of interest.

Mrs. Olive Logsdon, Mrs. Elmer Mallory and Miss Louise Carley of Ashville were Friday visitors in Circleville.

Miss Frances Hill of Williamsport stopped in Circleville, Friday.

Mrs. Van Meter Hulse and son, of Jackson township were Friday visitors in Circleville.

Mrs. Lester Fausnaugh of near Commercial Point was a Circleville shopper, Friday.

Bleaching Cauliflower Heads

To keep them white the heads or curds of cauliflower must be bleached by protecting them from the sun. It is important to cover them early, for if they once turn color from exposure nothing can be done to whiten them.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, the large outer leaves should be tied up over the heads when they first begin to develop. Tie the leaves together with raffia, being careful not to bruise or break them, since they must continue to grow.

Cultivation of young cauliflower plants must be done carefully as the foliage is brittle and breaks easily. Remember also that the roots run near the surface so that cultivation must be shallow.

THE STORY of a man who really stole a million opens Sunday at the Grand. Starring George Raft and Claire Trevor, "I Stole a Million" features Dick Foran, Henry Armetta and Victor Jory.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

QUESTION: Please suggest a good evergreen hedge.

ANSWER: The evergreens best adapted for a hedge here in Ohio are the hemlock, Japanese yew, Cannart juniper, Douglas arborvitae, giant arborvitae. You might also use Euonymus vegetus for a broad-leaved evergreen. If the hedge will be in the shade the yew or the hemlock or the Euonymus would be the most satisfactory.

QUESTION: How do you apply a 10-6-4 grass fertilizer to the lawn without burning the grass?

ANSWER: As long as you do not put on an overdose there should be no burning. Two pounds to 100 square feet is ample. Although this may be broadcast by hand, it is much easier to put it on with the regular lawn fertilizer spreader.

QUESTION: What kind of evergreen tree is used most for Christmas trees?

ANSWER: If you are to grow the trees here in Ohio you will find Norway spruce best, but if you are buying the trees for your own use the Balsam fir is preferred because it does not shed needles as does the spruce. The fir, however, cannot be satisfactorily grown here in this state.

QUESTION: Some time ago you recommended that I purchase Sorbaria aitchisoni. How does this differ from Sorbaria sorbifolia?

ANSWER: The false spirea or Sorbaria is usually sold as a spirea by many nurseries. The old-fashioned form, sorbifolia, grows about four feet high, blooms in June and suckers badly. The newer form, aitchisoni, grows seven to ten feet high, blooms in July and does not ordinarily sucker to the extent of the older variety. It is usually considered preferable.

In a severe winter it might die back to the ground but, blooming as late as it does, it will grow up as tall as it was the previous season.

QUESTION: Would you advise the use of sulfur around rhododendrons?

ANSWER: Sulfur is used to acidify the soil and if your rhododendrons are growing in a soil that is not naturally acid, it can be used to advantage. However, the amount can only be determined after your soil has been tested and its reaction determined. If you will take a sample to your county agricultural agent, he will be glad to see that it is tested.

QUESTION: Is there any advantage in dusting roses just after spraying?

ANSWER: I can see absolutely no reason for dusting them since your spray should contain the necessary ingredients to control diseases as well as insects. Your dust also should contain these same things. Incidentally, I find that dusting is slightly easier and more convenient than spraying. Your roses should be dusted at least once a week and after every rain. A mixture of 9 parts dusting sulfur, 1 part arsenate of lead and 2 parts rotenone or pyrethrum dust is very efficient, so long as the temperature is not over 95 degrees.

QUESTION: Is there any shrub which could be used as a screen under the road and the house under an elm tree 10 years old?

ANSWER: Yes, you will find any of the shrubs tolerant of shade will grow under this condition. I would particularly recommend five-leaf aralia, Tatarian honeysuckle, Morrow honeysuckle, flowering currant, Itoya privet, European privet. Among the viburnums the only one you would find entirely satisfactory due to the dry condition of the soil would be the wayfaring tree, Viburnum lantana.

QUESTION: Is it necessary to plant the wintercreeper, Ilex verticillata, in pairs to produce berries?

ANSWER: Yes, a male and female plant are necessary, however, one male plant will do for a whole group of females.

QUESTION: Is a firethorn hardy in the vicinity of Akron?

ANSWER: Yes, however, the firethorn is best planted in the Spring and should always have a ball of earth or else be in pots. I would not plant one much larger than two feet in diameter.

QUESTION: The various forms of wintercreeper (Euonymus radicans) are perfectly hardy and will not burn in the winter sun. However, you will often be sold another form of Euonymus (Euonymus patens) which will usually burn and shed its leaves during January or February.

QUESTION: Are dwarf fruit trees practical for the small home grounds?

ANSWER: I do not feel that many fruit trees are practical for the home garden, with the exception of sour cherries, unless you are willing to carry on a regular spray program to keep the tree and the fruit healthy. If you are particularly interested in fruit trees you will be willing to do this and to use the trees as you would any other small tree in the landscape planting, then you will receive sufficient enjoyment from them to make them worthwhile.

QUESTION: What can I do for chiggers? Every time I go out in the garden I get another bunch of them.

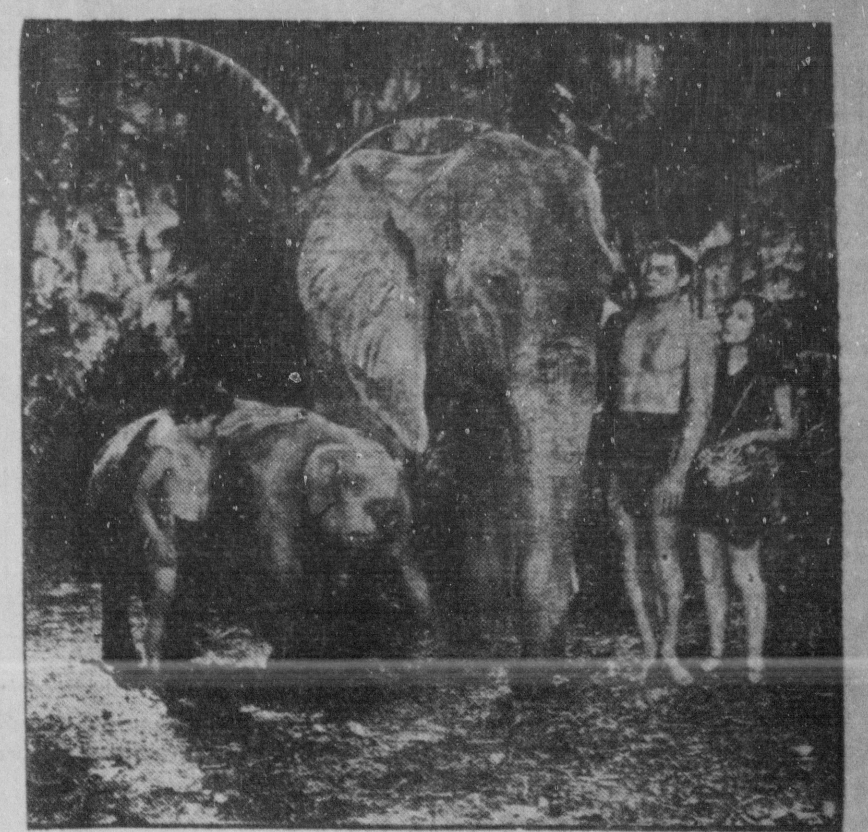

ANSWER: The chiggers are little mites that are on your bushes and in the long grass. Like most of these mites, they are rather easily killed by sulfur. I find that mixing equal parts of talcum powder and dusting sulfur and applying it to myself is easier than sulfurating the whole garden and trying to kill all of them.

QUESTION: We have just moved into a new home and would like to get the front lawn started. Would you recommend that I seed it now or sod it?

ANSWER: It is absolutely too late for Spring seeding and is too early for Fall seeding. It will be possible for you to sod it but remember, to save the sod, you will have to water it heavily to a depth of three or four inches every week or 10 days throughout the rest of the Summer.

QUESTION: What is the best time to transplant rose bushes and how do you cut clips from them and when? I would also like to know how to thin out my hedge.

ANSWER: The Fall is the best time of the year to plant rose bushes. They can be successfully planted in the Spring provided adequate care is given as far as watering and pruning are concerned.

MARKING his first appearance on the screen in three years, Johnny Weissmuller comes to the Cliftona theatre starting Sunday in his famous role of Tarzan, King of the Jungle, in the latest adventures of the Edgar Rice Burroughs hero, "Tarzan Finds a Son!" Maureen O'Sullivan is once again seen as his mate, Jane, and an exciting new character is introduced in the person of five-year-old John Sheffield as "Tarzan, Jr.," who emulates Weissmuller's athletic and underwater swimming feats.

—But It's The Cook Who Prepares All The Meals

IT IS ALWAYS good to remember how science and industry keep busy providing us with nice fresh foods. Advanced methods of refrigeration, quick-freeze, canning in shining cans or preserving in gleaming glass jars; rushing foods by fast train and truck—all these contribute to our daily fare. So it's three cheers for the brilliant scientists and industrialists concerned with foods, and a rousing "tiger" for the smart gals who cerned. Fall planting gives the plant a better opportunity to establish a good root system before Spring. Slips or cuttings can be taken from these plants most any time during the Summer. You do not say what kind of a hedge you have, hence it will be difficult to tell you just how to handle it. If it is a privet, I suggest you cut it clear to the ground early next Spring, sometime in March. It will come up again just like a new hedge.

QUESTION: Is it too early to transplant the bearded or German iris?

ANSWER: Now is the ideal time to transplant your bearded iris. They are relatively dormant and can be handled with the minimum amount of care. Incidentally, I would advise that all clumps of iris that have been in three years or more be divided.

In dividing, check over each rhizome carefully to see there is no feels soft when slit open will have borer in it. Each rhizome that a borer in it.

QUESTION: Driving past a nice home with a lovely garden the other day, I saw some big yellow lily-like flowers about two feet high blooming in their flower border. Can you give me any idea what these might be?

ANSWER: You probably saw some of the newer varieties of daylilies or Hemerocallis. You yourself probably have the early one, the Lemon Lily. Among the newer varieties which I would suggest you try are Hyperion, J. A. Crawford, Bay State, Mrs. Austin, Anna Betscher, and Sir Michael Foster. There are many others. You will find they are usually satisfactory because they are absolutely hardy, easily grown, and dependable in bloom.

QUESTION: I have a very lovely maple tree in my lawn but this year for the first time there are a number of irregular black spots on the leaves. Is this serious? Is there anything I can do for it?

ANSWER: There are several leaf spot diseases of maples which are more common some seasons than others. They are seldom serious although they may defoliate the tree earlier than usual. You can check them by spraying with one of the copper sprays such as coposol, Cupro K, or bordeaux mixture. May I also suggest that as the leaves fall they be raked and burned to prevent possible reinfection next year.

QUESTION: What is the best time to transplant rose bushes and how do you cut clips from them and when? I would also like to know how to thin out my hedge.

ANSWER: The Fall is the best time of the year to plant rose bushes. They can be successfully planted in the Spring provided adequate care is given as far as watering and pruning are concerned.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, July 22

A RATHER routine state of affairs as far as business is concerned is read from the astral directions of the day. Moderate success may be made by persistence and sound judgment. It is probable that all this may be of little incentive because of a rather perplexing or belated status of private affairs. Sentimental values are likely to overrule things of a sordid nature. Be wise with writings.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of moderate success, with matters advancing by industry or forced application. But these are of negligible interest because of the urgency of a purely private complication that needs placating or adjustment. It involves the realm of the social, domestic or sentimental, and calls for prudent manipulation.

A child born on this day may have certain sturdy talents, but it may be disposed to take things easy or to devote itself to the pursuit of personal happiness, with much romantic indulgence.

For Sunday, July 23

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a rather adverse one, with a series of difficult or doubtful situations calling for amicable adjustment. While there is an opening for promotion, progress, prestige and popularity, a decided impulse to reckless, wayward, combative or indulgent behavior may distract from real advantages. It is quite likely that these detriments may arise from involvements with "the opposite sex."

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of some success and fulfilled ambitions if they will apply themselves to workaday interests and not be carried away by storm, tumult and reckless indulgence where the opposite sex is concerned.

A child born on this day, although having fine energies and mentality, may be indulgent, passionate, wilful and erratic unless given early direction.

PARIS BUSES SAVE GAS
PARIS.—In order to effect a drastic saving in gasoline, Paris buses will in the future stop only when requested. The abolition of unnecessary stops will it is estimated, result in large savings of gasoline.

POPULAR MUSIC FAVORED
ST. LOUIS.—Popular music and swing won by a wide margin when St. Louis high school students were asked in a recent survey to express preferences for different types of music. Bands, symphonies and vocal and instrumental soloists trailed far behind.

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

Washington. Frank Murphy, new Attorney General was sitting in his slippers at 7 p. m. when entered several of his subordinates in charge of criminal prosecutions and tax cases.

They had come on an emergency request to discuss the income tax case of Boss Pendergast of Kansas City. Pendergast had been a faithful Roosevelt supporter. He had delivered to Roosevelt not only in 1936 but in 1932. Two years before (shortly after the Louisiana income tax deal was arranged) the Treasury Department also had come upon irregularities in Boss Pendergast's taxes. But somehow, somehow, action was mysteriously stopped.

But now the Treasury had unearthed some new evidence, perhaps because Governor Stark of Missouri was waging a knock-down, drag-out battle with the Pendergast machine.

A grand jury was sitting in Kansas City. The Federal District Attorney, crusading Maurice Milligan, was ready to prosecute, and Frank Murphy's subordinates wanted to know what they should do.

"Why do you come to me for a decision?" asked the Attorney General. "Isn't the answer obvious?"

"In cases like this," they replied, "we have always put the decision to the Attorney General."

"Then phone Milligan in the morning that if the case is in the public interest, he should go ahead."

There was some further discussion as to whether the case should go over to the October session of the grand jury, (as the Pendergast forces hoped) because the Internal Revenue agents had not completed their investigation. But Murphy pointed out that by October the key witnesses might disappear.

Ten minutes after the Justice Department officials left, Governor Stark called Murphy from Missouri and asked what the government's decision was. He said that Pendergast's nephew and Emmett O'Malley, Missouri insurance commissioner, also facing charges, had called upon Farley and other high officials that afternoon. Stark apparently had someone trailing them, for he knew their exact movements.

Murphy reassured Stark that he had instructed District Attorney Milligan to proceed with the case.

"Thank God," replied the Governor of Missouri.

That night Murphy got to worrying about the situation, was afraid some slip might occur. So next morning he flew to Kansas City himself, made sure that all the federal forces went full steam ahead on the prosecution of Boss Pendergast.

So the Boss of Kansas City, faithful follower of Franklin Roosevelt, is now behind the bars.

NOTE—Keep an eye on Jersey City and Connecticut. There has been a big change in Washington.

RURAL ELECTRIC SHOW PLANNED JULY 31-AUG. 1

Amanda District Farm To Be Used To Display Conveniences

Prizes valued at approximately $500, including an electric range worth $160, and numerous electrical appliances will be given away at the R.E.A. farm equipment show to be held Monday and Tuesday, July 31 and Aug. 1.

The show will be held on the Raymond Merz farm, near Amanda, on the Royalton road about a mile north of Route 22. Several Circleville merchants plan exhibits at the show, to be attended by numerous Pickaway countians.

There will be manufacturers, exhibits, demonstrations, and displays of feed mills, shellers, elevators, ensilage cutters, pumps, motors and other electrical equipment of all types.

In Eight States

The farm equipment show, with its tents and its truck loads of equipment and its skilled personnel, is following the season from North to South, with showings in eight states. It is possible through the cooperation of the extension service, the Rural Electrification Administration, farm electric equipment manufacturers, with the South Central Rural Electric cooperative and neighboring cooperatives in Licking and Highland counties.

The first evening's program includes a cooking contest, discussions of electrical costs, and a demonstration of the new low-cost package lighting fixtures, and discussions of various electric-powered farm equipment.

Starting off at 10:30 o'clock the next morning and until late afternoon, the men will see local grains, sorghums, hay, and fodder shelled, ground, elevated, and cut or chopped. Many of the new smaller mills especially designed for electric operation will be set up to run automatically through a number of processes. While ear corn cannot be satisfactorily handled by automatic methods because of its tendency to brige, the other grains will run from bin through grinder for hour after hour while the farmer is away tending to other

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, July 22

A RATHER routine state of affairs as far as business is concerned is read from the astral directions of the day. Moderate success may be made by persistence and sound judgment. It is probable that all this may be of little incentive, because of a rather perplexing or clouded status of private affairs. Sentimental values are likely to overrule things of a sordid nature. Be wise with writings.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of moderate success, with matters advancing by industry or forced application. But these are of negligible interest because of the urgency of a purely private complication that needs placating or adjustment. It involves the realm of the social, domestic or sentimental, and calls for prudent manipulation.

A child born on this day may have certain sturdy talents, but it may be disposed to take things easy or to devote itself to the pursuit of personal happiness, with much romantic indulgence.

For Sunday, July 23

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a rather adverse one, with a series of difficult or doubtful situations calling for amicable adjustment. While there is an opening for promotion, progress, prestige and popularity, a decided impulse to reckless, wayward, combative or indulgent behavior may distract from real advantages. It is quite likely that these detriments may arise from involvements with "the opposite sex."

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of some success and fulfilled ambitions if they will apply themselves to workaday interests and not be carried away by storm, tumult and reckless indulgence where the opposite sex is concerned.

A child born on this day, although having fine energies and mentality, may be indulgent, passionate, wilful and erratic unless given early direction.

COUNCIL CHECKS CHARTER FORM GOVERNMENT PETITIONS; FEW NAMES CUT

NOVEMBER VOTE ON QUESTION TO BE SCHEDULED

Other Legislation At Confab Of Aldermen Covers Disposal Plant

The 15 petitions requesting a vote on the charter form of government were checked by councilmen, Friday night, declared to contain sufficient signatures, and an ordinance to submit the issue to voters was given a second reading.

The petitions were checked by council as a committee with William Reid as chairman. Only five names were removed. The petitions originally listed 447 names. The names removed were those of persons who had signed the petitions twice or had moved from the city since they were circulated. Only 351 names were needed to submit the issue to voters. This is 10 percent of the voters at the last general election.

Circleville folk will vote on the issue at the November election. The law provides the issue be submitted to voters in not less than 60 days nor more than 120 days. Filing of the petitions with council was delayed so the issue could be submitted in November, eliminating the expense of a special election.

Procedure Explained

Election of a commission to frame a charter will be held at the same time a vote is taken on the issue. If the issue passes at the November election a special election would then be called at a later date for a vote on the form of charter.

Other legislation considered by councilmen Friday night involved the new disposal plant. An ordinance was passed authorizing a contract between the city and Floyd G. Browne, engineer of the disposal plant project, for Mr. Browne to give technical supervision of the operation of the treatment works for one year. The amount to be paid for this supervision is $600.

Another ordinance, passed under suspension of rules appropriated $1,000 for operating charges and incidentals of the plant.

The report of Miss Lillian Young, city auditor, was received on the maximum maturity of a $2,000 bond issue to complete some items of the disposal plant project. An ordinance was then passed under suspension of rules declaring the necessity of the bond issue.

Another special meeting of council will be held Monday night to consider further legislation on the bond issue, Carl C. Leist, city solicitor, said the next ordinance will provide for the issuance of bonds without a vote.

SENATORS OKEH ACT CURTAILING POLITICAL WORK

Author Doubts If Nation's Chief Executive Will Attach Signature

cupping clerical or subordinate positions in the government, in its terms.

6—Exempts federal officials in so-called "policy-making" positions, such as the president, vice-president, members of the cabinet, etc.

7—Prohibits executive employes who come under the bill from serving as delegates to political conventions.

8—Carries penalties of $1,000 fine or one year imprisonment, or both, for violations.

The measure was the outgrowth of the senate's special investigation of charges of political use of relief funds during the primary elections last Fall.

HITLER'S OLIVE BRANCH PLACED ON SWORD POINT

BERLIN, July 22—Fuehrer Hitler was officially on record today as desiring a peaceful solution of the Danzig problem, but his olive branch was held aloft on a bayonet point.

Hitler's avowed "100 percent rejection of a solution by war" in restoring the Baltic port to the Reich and Germany's determination to fight if necessary, was summarized by a specially designated spokesman.

The statement made clear one point and that was that Germany anticipates Danzig will be handed to her without a struggle, in another Munich.

"A peaceful solution is still considered possible," Hitler's mouthpiece said, "but only through Poland backing down."

Rather than risk a general conflict, the spokesman intimated, Britain will induce Poland to yield Danzig without recourse to war.

(Editor's note: In London, official circles refused to comment, but indicated Germany's hopes were perhaps premature.)

"We maintain our demand for the unconditional return of Danzig to the Reich," the Nazi spokesman said. "Chancellor Hitler and the German government are convinced this can be achieved peacefully and they intend to achieve it."

The solution, peaceful or otherwise, of the Danzig dispute, the spokesman explained is not expected for "some months." Nothing was said about the Corridor.

GIRL, 16, MAKES MASK OF SELF; HAMMER, CHISEL NEEDED TO TAKE IT OFF

EVANSTON, Ill., July 22—Next time Miss Mildred Harmon, 16, wants to see herself as others see her she'll look in a mirror and let it go at that.

The girl tried to make herself a life mask of her face after hearing a lecturer describe the process. She covered her face with grease and then with plaster of paris, and let it harden as the lecturer had said.

She got the mask all right, but it wouldn't come off! A doctor working with hammer and chisel finally removed the mask and today Miss Harmon was back to normal—except that she'll have to grow another set of eyebrows.

ARMENIAN BOY, LOST 14 DAYS, KIDNAP VICTIM?

Hovannes left his home on the evening of July 8 for a movie and has not been seen since.

His father and his mother, Katherine and an older brother, Hagop, 19, a New York University student, were united in a belief that his disappearance was involuntary. Yet the family has reported receiving no ransom or vengeance notes.

Police were delving deeply into the family background for a trace of some possible blood feud among various Armenian groups that might account in some manner for Hovannes' disappearance.

wish to embarrass my friends, Governor Long or Mayor Maestri," said Weiss.

He referred to Governor Earl Long, brother of the late Huey Long, and Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans.

Weiss' resignation provoked widespread discussion in political circles, for it virtually marked the end of the regime which has controlled the state machine since the death in September, 1935, of "Kingfish" Long.

With Weiss stepping out, it leaves only Mayor Maestri of the triumvirate now holding office.

C. I. O. REQUESTS ROOSEVELT HELP IN MEAT STRIFE

CHICAGO, July 22—The C.I.O. has appealed to President Roosevelt to intervene in the controversy between the union and Armour and company, one of the nation's largest meat packers, it was revealed today.

Henry Johnson, director of the C.I.O.'s Packinghouse Workers Organizing committee, which has threatened to call a strike unless Armour agrees to collective bargaining for C.I.O. employes on a national basis, declared the union adopted this four-point program: (1) The deadlock between the P.W.O.C. and Armour has been explained to President Roosevelt, with an appeal for executive intervention.

(2) National leaders of the C.I.O. and P.W.O.C. were conferring at Washington with department of labor officials, demanding that Armour be compelled to recognize an N.L.R.B. order naming the P.W.O.C. as exclusive bargaining agent for Armour's Chicago workers.

(3) Every approach to a peaceful solution of the impasse is being made.

(4) Union forces are getting ready to strike if no settlement is reached.

The Armour management, meanwhile, apparently was standing pat on its announced intention to reject the P.W.O.C.'s request for a national bargaining conference.

F. D. R., FARLEY NEAR DECISION OVER NEW TERM term, it is understood, but whatever decision the President makes will be kept between them for the time being.

"On July 26 Farley will sail for Europe on a 7-week tour abroad because he is known to want to do the continent this year while he is still in his present position and has the time. He, no more than anyone else, knows anything of what the future may hold.

"But this much is certain:

"He has told intimates in Washington that he will issue a statement either before he sails or immediately after his return, giving his own position in national affairs.

Capital Source Hinted

"The reports that Farley is against a third term and will fight the President if he runs originated in Washington.

"They were supposed to have originated from 'three Democratic senators' who made assertions that Farley had told them he was taking an anti-Roosevelt, anti-third term position.

"Yet, investigation shows one of the senators who spread the story is an eastern Republican.

"Farley is supposed to have said:

"I am placing the good of the country above party considerations. I am willing to assist in the nomination of a good Democrat for first place on the ticket."

AFFIDAVITS GO TO JUDGE ABOUT MCCRADY'S CASE

Six more affidavits, making a total of 21 now on file, were sent to Judge Phil A. Henderson, of Logan, Saturday, for consideration in the motion for a new trial in the suit of William F. McCrady, W. Franklin street, as administrator, against the Benedict Transportation Lines, Inc., of Columbus.

The affidavits were from attorneys and concerned their knowledge of alleged misconduct of a juror. In the motion for a new trial it is contended one of the jurors failed to disclose information he knew about the case when examined for jury duty.

Mr. McCrady sued for $12,361.40. His son, John, was killed March 13, 1936 in a tractor-trailer and auto collision on Route 23, north of Circleville. A verdict was returned for the defendant.

The last affidavits were from Attys. Ray Davis, Max Seyfert, T. A. Renick, George and Paul Adkins and Dale Miller.

NEW YORK SCOTCHMAN'S DREAM OF HEAVEN, SAYS VISITING GLASGOWITE

NEW YORK, July 22—New York is a Scotchman's idea of Heaven, according to Patrick Joseph Dolan, lord provost (mayor) of Glasgow.

"Here I've been visiting a city of millionaires for three days without a dime in my pocket," the Glasgow mayor revealed at a luncheon given by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

RANSOM AMOUNT CUT, BUT ARABS RETAIN MINISTER

JERUSALEM, July 22—Although ransom demands by Arab kidnapers for release of the Rev. Gerould R. Goldner have been slashed from $5,000 to $1,000, the Cleveland missionary was still a prisoner today.

The missionary's father, the Rev. Dr. Jacob Goldner, who was captured with his son but released to obtain the ransom money, received a note by a mysterious Bedouin messenger in which the younger Goldner advised that there was no alternative but to pay the money.

The note said the kidnapped Goldner was in good health.

The father, however, lacks the funds needed and police object to payment of any ransom to discourage banditry as a profitless venture.

British soldiers scoured the hills in search of the cave where Goldner is held.

The United States consul-general is hopeful of contacting the kidnapers over the weekend.

HEAVEN'S GATES READY TO OPEN FOR DIVINE CULT

NEWPORT, R. I., July 22—Heaven's Gates—the gates of Father Divine's proposed new Heaven in swanky Newport will swing open almost any day now.

Mrs. Angela Kaufman, wealthy owner of "The Castle," who offered her residence to the Harlem cult leader for another of his numerous Heavens, promised the new paradise would be open for business within two weeks.

In appreciation of the patronage our friends have given us during our 39 years of selling Quality Home Furnishings, we have arranged to give away $400.00 worth of carefully selected merchandise by our GOOD WILL SYSTEM.

This Is the Plan of Our GOOD WILL SYSTEM

- For every $1 purchase you make at our store you receive $5 worth of Good Will Coupons, and for every payment on account you receive $5 Good Will Coupon on each $1 paid. For illustration, if you purchase $20 worth and pay cash you receive $200 worth of Good Will Coupons. On a $20 credit purchase you receive $100 worth of Good Will Coupons and if you pay $5 cash down on the purchase you also receive $25 additional Good Will Coupons. For each additional payment you make later you will receive $5 worth of Good Will Coupons for each $1 cash paid.
- We will give New Customer Cards to any of our customers for them to give to their friends. The customer signs his or her name on the card and gives to friends to whom they wish to recommend our store. The new customer brings the card to our store and for every $1 worth of merchandise bought will receive coupons as explained above, and the old customer will receive $5 worth of Good Will Coupons for every $1 worth of merchandise the new customer purchases. Each person may have as many New Customer Cards as can be used.
- At any time, up to the closing date which will be specified later, Good Will Coupon holders may make sealed and secret bids on any 3 of the 20 valuable merchandise articles we are placing on the block (see list below). The Good Will Coupons are to be used in lieu of money. Each customer may bid on three articles.
- If any one person bids high on two or more articles the article of most value will be given. In case of a tie by two or more persons on the same article a merchandise credit for full value of the article will be given each tie bidder.
